Space Triumph Forecast

JOHNSON CITY, Tex. AP - President Johnson, marking the end of the Gemini space program, predicted today still greater U.S. successes in space including the Apollo man-on-the-moon program.

In his first formal speech since his twin operations a week ago, Johnson said, "Gemini has prepared well, for the more ambitious Apollo flights to come."

"The months ahead will not be easy as we reach toward the moon. We must broaden and extend our know-how based on the increased power of those mighty new boosters. But with Gemini as the forerunner, I am confident that we will overcome the difficulties and achieve another success," he said.

Johnson spoke at a ceremony at the LBJ Ranch in which the Gemini 12 astronauts, Navy Capt. James A. Lovell Jr. and Air Force Maj. Edwin E. Aldrin Jr., received the National Aeronatuics and Space Administration Exceptional Service Award from him.

Eight other persons prominently connected with the Gemini program also received NASA awards.

Among them were Dr. George E. Mueller, associate NASA director for manned space flights, and Charles W. Mathews, Project Gemini director, both of whom received the Distinguished Service Award; and Maj. Gen. Vincent G. Huston, commander of the Air Force Eastern Test Range, who was given the Outstanding Leadership Award.

Johnson also arranged a later session with key advisers to discuss troop levels in Western Europe.

"The splendid performance of man and machine in the Gemini program has been a product of the American system," Johnson said. "It is an example of that system at its best."

Johnson said he was especially proud that "our program has been carried out openly," with millions of people around the world watching on television as the Titan rockets took the astronauts skyward.

What Has Thanksgiving to Say?

By DAVID POLING
Consultant on Religion
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Two years ago, Eli Goldfarb, a 77-year-old doorkeeper of a Manhattan apartment building, bought a quarter-page advertisement in The New York Times.

He spent $996, a portion of his life's savings, to print an essay entitled "Thanks." It was his way to thank God publicly for his good life in this country, for loving parents, his job, this free land filled with diverse, strange and friendly citizens. He said:

"This last year has been such a wonderful year and so I pray to God that I may never forget to thank Him each day."

That was one man's way of expressing thanks in the 20th century. But what about the place of Thanksgiving?

Is it lost in the preparations for Christmas or submerged in the supermarket sale of turkeys or the stadium packed with alumni pleading for a game-ending touchdown? Is Thanksgiving just a nostalgic memory of a New England three centuries ago with its quaint banquet of Pilgrims and puzzled Indians, with no real connection to the free swinging days of 1966?

David Poling

There are convincing reasons to believe that Thanksgiving is not only one of the more vital and enduring holidays, but the most American festival of all. For Thanksgiving may become a strong, quiet way to resolve a touchy religious issue which has unsettled our public schools and disturbed too many communities.

Thanksgiving has plenty to say to our swinging society which can be easily grounded by religious quarrels of racial skirmishes. We must learn over and over again the meaning of strength out of diversity. Otherwise this pluralistic society will neither be great nor lasting.

That first Thanksgiving of 1621 was no little fish fry with a few scrawny turkeys and some Indian corn.

Remember these Pilgrims had buried half their colony in a frightful winter of starvation and sickness. Now the harvest had come and the religious fellowship recognized a wider community. The survivors were Pilgrims, Indians, believers, nonbelievers. To enjoy a three-day banquet the natural divisions of religious doctrine, political loyalty and party spirit were blended into a human fellowship that made Thanksgiving natural.

Thanksgiving, then, was a deep religious expression that meant unity and not division.

More than a century later the American community had experienced a different crisis. The Revolutionary War was over but strife and uncertainty unsteadied our national government. After bitter and bruising debate a new Constitution was adopted. For George Washington, 1789 saw some dreams come true and his Thanksgiving proclamation indicated the depths of his praise to God and his thanks for the young republic that was delivered from political and social chaos.

At almost any major turn in our country's history, Thanksgiving has been the season to reflect upon the mood and hopes of the people. It has a binding quality, a healing capacity.

Lincoln did not think especially of a turkey shoot or of a New England pumpkin when he issued a call for a day of Thanksgiving in 1863. He saw the War Between the States drawing to a close. He saw an end to the terrible swift sword that was slaughtering the youth.

So to him, Thanksgiving was the day to proclaim a better future after a bloody past. Take any Thanksgiving season in the years of crisis and you find presidents, governors and public officials touching upon the relevant events of the hour.

Through the years, Thanksgiving has been a rallying point for all men of good will. It is a genuine holiday that united the religious community in a way which neither Christmas nor Easter can guarantee: for the union services of the worship of God have a broad and generous range.

The major religious bodies, Christian and non-Christian, are able to participate in community services without sticky discussions over the sacraments or particular ritual. This season the most American of holidays enjoys the support of the Ethical Culture Society, the Jewish synagogue and the diocesan cathedral. Thanksgiving is uncluttered by theological bone-picking and makes possible the free expression of thanks to God in new and unchartered ways.

Thanksgiving observance has flexibility and resiliency to fit the needs and requirements of the American people. For this reason alone, it offers opportunity for the future as well as reverence for the past.

Some educators, politicians and religious leaders believe that Thanksgiving may offer a valuable clue to the future of religion in the public school. We must admit that prayer and Bible reading in the public schools have generated angry controversies and unpleasant campaigns. (The recent Dirksen "amendment" attempt indicates how final some consider the Supreme Court decision on the matter.)

The history, tradition and practical qualities of Thanksgiving may be one answer to the dilemma. By its very nature, the holiday is neutral in religion yet conscious of God's blessings to all men. There never has been an inkling of "sectarian" advantage yet the spiritual foundations are older than the Constitution, the Supreme Court and Congress itself. The New England feast of 1621 has something to say about the religious peace of 1966.

Canada Offers Solution

UNITED NATIONS, Y.Y. (AP) -Despite a new blast by Red China against the United Nations, Canada pushed today for the seating of both the Peking government and Nationalist China as part of a temporary solution to the China representation controversy.

Canadian Foreign Secretary Paul Martin took note of the latest Peking statement in advancing his suggestion before the U.N. General Assembly. He departed from his prepared text briefly to say he was aware of the statements from Peking in the past 24 hours. But he did not comment further.

He endorsed an Italian plan for a high-level study of the China question-rejected by Peking as "absurd" - but declared that the proposal should spell out more specifically a set of guidelines to be followed in seeking a solution to the 16-year stalemate.

Martin said Canada had laid down a three-point plan during private consultations it had been carrying on in recent days with leading U.N. members.

The guidelines he suggested calling for an interim settlement on the following basis:

- Participation of Nationalist China in the General Assembly as a member "representing a territory over which it exercises effective jurisdiction."
- Participation of Red China in the assembly on the same basis.
- Participation of Red China in the Security Council as a permanent member.

Martin stressed that his plan was intended only as a stopgap solution pending agreement on the territorial dispute between Red China and the Nationalist government on Formosa.

"I want to make it clear at this point," he said, "that the solution we envisage is in no way intended to imply the existence of two Chinas."

Army Recalls M-1 to Offset Shortage of Newer Rifles

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army ran short of standard M14 rifles in the United States during September and October.

The Pentagon, acknowledging today what it called a temporary shortage, said nearly 15,000 retired M1 rifles were pulled from depot stocks to fill the gap.

The .30 caliber M1 was phased out beginning in 1961 and succeeded by the lighter M14, a 7.62mm weapon weighing about 8 pounds.

In response to questions, the Defense Department attributed the weapons deficit to "increased unit activations and concurrent increases in the training base requirements." The Army has been training men at a rate of about 50,000 a month, with a net monthly gainly of 20,000 to 25,000.

The Pentagon emphasized that:

--Reissues of the old M1 ended on Oct. 21 and each man now armed with it will get the modern M14 within four to six weeks.

--Every new soldier has been and is being trained with the M14 and no one who was given the older weapon was scheduled for overseas deployment.

-- No soldiers serving outside the continental United States are armed with the M1.

Sources said the Pentagon has stepped up production of the new M16 rifle which has been going to troops in Viet Nam. The M14 production lines were closed down two or three years ago, with the M16 envisioned as an interim replacement until the Army comes up with a new standard weapon for future years.

Some military commanders favor the 6-pound, rapid firing M16 for jungle warfare, but officers in other areas of the world such as Europe, prefer the M14.

The M16 fires a 5.56mm round, only slightly larger than the .22 caliber bullet used by small-game hunters.

About 630,000 M16s have been ordered, officials said. The Army is getting nearly half, the Air Force and the Marines the remainder.

One high military officer said the weapons shortage is not serious and, in fact, "as rifles go, this is pretty minute." He described it as indicative of problems of distribution in an Army now totaling 1.3 million men and still growing.

But the Army Times, an unofficial publication designed for servicemen, in today's edition quoted a source as saying the number of reissued M1s approached 30,000, twice that officially acknowledged.

The Times said it inquired about the rifle shortage three weeks ago but added: "The answer was received from DOD (Department of Defense) after the November election."

Living Costs Up Again But Food Prices Dip Slightly

WASHINGTON (AP) - Living costs rose four-tenths of one per cent last month as virtually all consumer goods and services except food increased in price, the Labor Department reported today.

Retail food prices went down two-tenths of one per cent, but costs continued up for housing, clothing, medical care, automobiles and many other items measured by the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

The October increase, the ninth straight monthly rise, brought the index up to 114.5, meaning it cost $11.45 last month to purchase items worth $10 in the 1957-59 base period.

As almost always, the increase brought the consumer price to a new all-time high. The monthly index occasionally has remained stable, or even dropped slightly temporarily, but the long term trend has been upward.

The bureau also reported that after-tax earnings of some 15 million factory workers rose 11 cents a week to $92.72 for single workers and to $100.65 for workers with three dependents-but they lost 20 cents a week in purchasing power because of the continuing price hikes.

Commissioner Arthur M. Ross, asked whether the long upward spiral of prices could be described as inflationary, said, "Obviously it's more than we like to see."

Prices measured by the government in the consumer price index were 3.7 per cent higher over-all than a year ago, continuing the steepest climb in nine years.

Ross said if prices follow last year's November and December pattern, living costs over 1966 will average out to 3.7 per cent higher than those in 1965.

Reporting on a special study to see if higher auto prices reflected increased value of new 1967 models, Ross said most of the price increase was due to

Aldrin Reveals Oddity

SPACE CENTER, Houston, Tex. (AP)—Gemini 12's champion spacewalker revealed today he saw a strange phenomenon while working outside his spaceship: Rubbing his fingers together sparked a faint glow.

"I noticed the peculiar thing during the night pass," Air Force Maj. Edwin E. (Buzz) Aldrin Jr. told a news conference. "I think its something we should look at."

Aldrin, who teamed with Navy Capt. James A. Lovell Jr. for the four-day Gemini 12 flight that rang down the curtain on America's Project Gemini, had no explanation for what it might be.

Over-all, Aldrin said, spacewalking "went quite a bit smoother than I actually thought it would."

Aldrin, a rookie who mastered the hostilities of space with three historic ventures totaling 5½ hours, returned from space with the world's title for space walking.

"We didn't run into a single problem that gave us any trouble," he noted.

Lovell said the two men had a brief period of disappointment shortly after they got into space and were chasing an Agena rocket for a rendezvous.

"Buzz noticed that the computer wasn't giving any change in range," Lovell said, explaining that the radar was supposed to feed the computer with data.

He added that he then looked at the control board and noticed that the radar had apparently lost its lock-on.

"For a minute we just looked

Dexter Bond Issue Approved

JEFFERSON CITY AP - Industrial development bond issues for Brookfield and Dexter have been approved by the Missouri Commerce and Industrial Development Commission, chairman William A. McDonnell announced today.

A $250,000 general obligation bond issue will be voted on at Dexter to buy a building for International Hat Co. which has two plants there now employing 95 people. The new plant will provide an additional 70 to 100 jobs.

No date has been set for the Dexter bond election.

In Brookfield, a $600,000 general obligation bond proposal to expand and equip a building for the Whitaker Cable Corp. will be voted on Dec. 15.

Cotton Voting By Mail Dec. 5-9

BENTON -- Shirley McArthur, chairman of the Scott county ASCS committee, announced today that cotton marketing quotas will be voted on by mail Dec. 5-9. Farmers will vote on whether they favor marketing quotas for next year's cotton crop. If quotas are approved by a two-thirds majority, quotas and a new cotton program will be put into effect.

If quotas are not approved, allotments will remain in effect for the 1967 cotton crop, but there will be no marketing quotas and no penalties on excess cotton. There will be no additional price support in payments, no diversion payments, and no export market acreage reserve. Price support loans at only 50 per cent of parity will be available to growers who do not exeed their farm's acreage allotment.

Also to be voted on is the cotton research and promotion order. This is an act to enable cotton producers to establish, finance and carry out a coordinated program of research and promotion to improve the competitive position of cotton and to expand its markets.

The proposed program would be administered by a cotton board composed of members nominated by cotton-producing organizations and selected by the secretary of agriculture. Each cotton producing state will have at least one member on the Board. Larger states will have additional members.

The program would be financed through assessments of $1 per bale from cotton producers, to be collected by handlers designated by the board. Collections from any producer, who did not wish to contribute, would be refunded upon written request. Assessment would start at the beginning of the 1967 ginning season.

Producers are eligible to vote in the referendum if they were engaged in the production of cotton in 1966. This includes landowners, operators, tenants and sharecroppers.

Ballots will be mailed to producers from the ASCS office Dec. 2 and must be returned before Dec. 9 in order to be eligible. A copy of voting instructions will be included.

Businesses To Observe Thanksgiving

Most businesses, offices and factories will close in observance of Thanksgiving Thursday.

All city offices with the exception of the police department and the fire department will be closed. All state and federal offices will be closed.

Only a few grocery stores, service stations and restaurants will be open.

International Shoe Factory, Anchor Toy, Canvas Products Co., and Potlatch Forests Inc. dairy service division will resume work Friday.

State offices will operate with skeleton crews Friday giving most state employes a four-day weekend.

No Standard

The Daily Standard will not publish Thursday because of the Thanksgiving Day holiday. Publication will be resumed Friday.

The office will be closed Thursday.

Motorist Faces Three Charges

Three charges were filed by police Tuesday against a Sikeston man arrested on Luther street.

Dick Green, 1704 Ford, was charged with driving while intoxicated, operating a motor vehicle without an operator's license, and operating a vehicle with improper registration. He was transferred to Scott County authorities.

Terrance R. Schaefer, 814 Harvard, was arrested Tuesday on East Malone and charged with carele[illegible] improper driving.

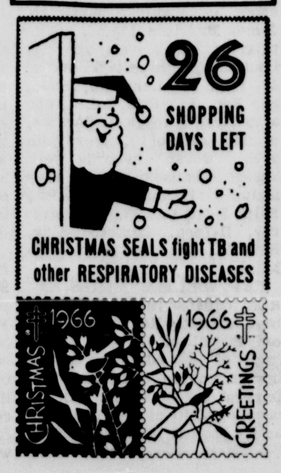
School's Out Until Monday

Public schools will be closed Thursday and Friday.

Thanksgiving programs were held in home rooms of grade schools, and an assembly sponsored by the student council was held at 2:40 p.m. today in the high school.

St. Francis Xavier grade school had a half day of school today, and will have no classes Thursday or Friday.

Classes will resume Monday.



Alternate Plans for Watershed Presented

Thirty landowners, including officials of the Soil Conservation Service, members of the county courts of Scott, Mississippi and New Madrid, heard a SCS report on the St. Johns Bayou basin and the St. James watershed.

The meeting was held Tuesday afternoon at the Fabick Bros. Equipment Company meeting room where a 35-page report was outlined by Dale Fishgrabe, Cape Girardeau, area conservationist, and Vern Moss, Columbia, Missouri watershed planning engineer for the SCS.

The three-county watershed basin covers 277,000 acres, lying in two drainage districts, the St. Johns Bayou Basin and the St. James. The watershed is 39 miles long and 22 miles wide, lies in parts of the three counties. The St. Johns district covers 208,750 acres. The St. James district covers 68,250 acres.

Four alternate plane were outlined to the leaders of the two drainage districts, who will arrange to explain the plans to landowners in the districts.

The plans.

No. 1 -- Consists of 1.5 miles of levee construction, and channel improvements. The total estimated structural measure installation cost is $4,632,078, with the federal cost estimated at $3,097,708 and local cost at $1,534,370, for an average of 67 per cent federal cost.

No. 2 -- Consists of 1.5 miles levee construction, with the same number of miles channel improvement, two additional ten by ten feet floodgates in the Birds Point-New Madrid Setback levee. The total cost estimate is $5,882,288, with federal cost of $3,989,709, and local cost of $1,892,580.

No. 3 -- Consists of 1.5 miles levee construction, 214 miles channel improvements, and 1,000 cubic feet per second capacity pumping plant. Total installation costs estimated at would be $7,870,788. Federal

Army Recalls M-1 to Offset Shortage of Newer Rifles

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army ran short of standard M14 rifles in the United States during September and October.

The Pentagon, acknowledging today what it called a temporary shortage, said nearly 15,000 retired M1 rifles were pulled from depot stocks to fill the gap.

The .30 caliber M1 was phased out beginning in 1961 and succeeded by the lighter M14, a 7.62mm weapon weighing about 8 pounds.

In response to questions, the Defense Department attributed the weapons deficit to "increased unit activations and concurrent increases in the training base requirements." The Army has been training men at a rate of about 50,000 a month, with a net monthly gainly of 20,000 to 25,000.

The Pentagon emphasized that:

--Reissues of the old M1 ended on Oct. 21 and each man now armed with it will get the modern M14 within four to six weeks.

--Every new soldier has been and is being trained with the M14 and no one who was given the older weapon was scheduled for overseas deployment.

-- No soldiers serving outside the continental United States are armed with the M1.

Sources said the Pentagon has stepped up production of the new M16 rifle which has been going to troops in Viet Nam. The M14 production lines were closed down two or three years ago, with the M16 envisioned as an interim replacement until the Army comes up with a new standard weapon for future years.

Some military commanders favor the 6-pound, rapid firing M16 for jungle warfare, but officers in other areas of the world such as Europe, prefer the M14.

The M16 fires a 5.56mm round, only slightly larger than the .22 caliber bullet used by small-game hunters.

About 630,000 M16s have been ordered, officials said. The Army is getting nearly half, the Air Force and the Marines the remainder.

One high military officer said the weapons shortage is not serious and, in fact, "as rifles go, this is pretty minute." He described it as indicative of problems of distribution in an Army now totaling 1.3 million men and still growing.

But the Army Times, an unofficial publication designed for servicemen, in today's edition quoted a source as saying the number of reissued M1s approached 30,000, twice that officially acknowledged.

The Times said it inquired about the rifle shortage three weeks ago but added: "The answer was received from DOD (Department of Defense) after the November election."

Living Costs Up Again But Food Prices Dip Slightly

WASHINGTON (AP) - Living costs rose four-tenths of one per cent last month as virtually all consumer goods and services except food increased in price, the Labor Department reported today.

Retail food prices went down two-tenths of one per cent, but costs continued up for housing, clothing, medical care, automobiles and many other items measured by the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

The October increase, the ninth straight monthly rise, brought the index up to 114.5, meaning it cost $11.45 last month to purchase items worth $10 in the 1957-59 base period.

As almost always, the increase brought the consumer price to a new all-time high. The monthly index occasionally has remained stable, or even dropped slightly temporarily, but the long term trend has been upward.

The bureau also reported that after-tax earnings of some 15 million factory workers rose 11 cents a week to $92.72 for single workers and to $100.65 for workers with three dependents-but they lost 20 cents a week in purchasing power because of the continuing price hikes.

Commissioner Arthur M. Ross, asked whether the long upward spiral of prices could be described as inflationary, said, "Obviously it's more than we like to see."

Prices measured by the government in the consumer price index were 3.7 per cent higher over-all than a year ago, continuing the steepest climb in nine years.

Ross said if prices follow last year's November and December pattern, living costs over 1966 will average out to 3.7 per cent higher than those in 1965.

Reporting on a special study to see if higher auto prices reflected increased value of new 1967 models, Ross said most of the price increase was due to

Aldrin Reveals Oddity

SPACE CENTER, Houston, Tex. (AP)—Gemini 12's champion spacewalker revealed today he saw a strange phenomenon while working outside his spaceship: Rubbing his fingers together sparked a faint glow.

"I noticed the peculiar thing during the night pass," Air Force Maj. Edwin E. (Buzz) Aldrin Jr. told a news conference. "I think its something we should look at."

Aldrin, who teamed with Navy Capt. James A. Lovell Jr. for the four-day Gemini 12 flight that rang down the curtain on America's Project Gemini, had no explanation for what it might be.

Over-all, Aldrin said, spacewalking "went quite a bit smoother than I actually thought it would."

Aldrin, a rookie who mastered the hostilities of space with three historic ventures totaling 5½ hours, returned from space with the world's title for space walking.

"We didn't run into a single problem that gave us any trouble," he noted.

Lovell said the two men had a brief period of disappointment shortly after they got into space and were chasing an Agena rocket for a rendezvous.

"Buzz noticed that the computer wasn't giving any change in range," Lovell said, explaining that the radar was supposed to feed the computer with data.

He added that he then looked at the control board and noticed that the radar had apparently lost its lock-on.

Dexter Bond Issue Approved

JEFFERSON CITY AP - Industrial development bond issues for Brookfield and Dexter have been approved by the Missouri Commerce and Industrial Development Commission, chairman William A. McDonnell announced today.

A $250,000 general obligation bond issue will be voted on at Dexter to buy a building for International Hat Co. which has two plants there now employing 95 people. The new plant will provide an additional 70 to 100 jobs.

No date has been set for the Dexter bond election.

In Brookfield, a $600,000 general obligation bond proposal to expand and equip a building for the Whitaker Cable Corp. will be voted on Dec. 15.

Cotton Voting By Mail Dec. 5-9

BENTON -- Shirley McArthur, chairman of the Scott county ASCS committee, announced today that cotton marketing quotas will be voted on by mail Dec. 5-9. Farmers will vote on whether they favor marketing quotas for next year's cotton crop. If quotas are approved by a two-thirds majority, quotas and a new cotton program will be put into effect.

If quotas are not approved, allotments will remain in effect for the 1967 cotton crop, but there will be no marketing quotas and no penalties on excess cotton. There will be no additional price support in payments, no diversion payments, and no export market acreage reserve. Price support loans at only 50 per cent of parity will be available to growers who do not exeed their farm's acreage allotment.

Also to be voted on is the cotton research and promotion order. This is an act to enable cotton producers to establish, finance and carry out a coordinated program of research and promotion to improve the competitive position of cotton and to expand its markets.

The proposed program would be administered by a cotton board composed of members nominated by cotton-producing organizations and selected by the secretary of agriculture. Each cotton producing state will have at least one member on the Board. Larger states will have additional members.

The program would be financed through assessments of $1 per bale from cotton producers, to be collected by handlers designated by the board. Collections from any producer, who did not wish to contribute, would be refunded upon written request. Assessment would start at the beginning of the 1967 ginning season.

Producers are eligible to vote in the referendum if they were engaged in the production of cotton in 1966. This includes landowners, operators, tenants and sharecroppers.

Ballots will be mailed to producers from the ASCS office Dec. 2 and must be returned before Dec. 9 in order to be eligible. A copy of voting instructions will be included.

Motorist Faces Three Charges

Three charges were filed by police Tuesday against a Sikeston man arrested on Luther street.

Dick Green, 1704 Ford, was charged with driving while intoxicated, operating a motor vehicle without an operator's license, and operating a vehicle with improper registration. He was transferred to Scott County authorities.

Terrance R. Schaefer, 814 Harvard, was arrested Tuesday on East Malone and charged with careless and improper driving.

School's Out Until Monday

Public schools will be closed Thursday and Friday.

Thanksgiving programs were held in home rooms of grade schools, and an assembly sponsored by the student council was held at 2:40 p.m. today in the high school.

St. Francis Xavier grade school had a half day of school today, and will have no classes Thursday or Friday.

Classes will resume Monday.

Businesses To Observe Thanksgiving

Most businesses, offices and factories will close in observance of Thanksgiving Thursday.

All city offices with the exception of the police department and the fire department will be closed. All state and federal offices will be closed.

Only a few grocery stores, service stations and restaurants will be open.

International Shoe Factory, Anchor Toy, Canvas Products Co., and Potlatch Forests Inc. dairy service division will resume work Friday.

State offices will operate with skeleton crews Friday giving most state employes a four-day weekend.

No Standard

The Daily Standard will not publish Thursday because of the Thanksgiving Day holiday. Publication will be resumed Friday.

The office will be closed Thursday.

Alternate Plans for Watershed Presented

Thirty landowners, including officials of the Soil Conservation Service, members of the county courts of Scott, Mississippi and New Madrid, heard a SCS report on the St. Johns Bayou basin and the St. James watershed.

The meeting was held Tuesday afternoon at the Fabick Bros. Equipment Company meeting room where a 35-page report was outlined by Dale Fishgrabe, Cape Girardeau, area conservationist, and Vern Moss, Columbia, Missouri watershed planning engineer for the SCS.

The three-county watershed basin covers 277,000 acres, lying in two drainage districts, the St. Johns Bayou Basin and the St. James. The watershed is 39 miles long and 22 miles wide, lies in parts of the three counties. The St. Johns district covers 208,750 acres. The St. James district covers 68,250 acres.

Four alternate plane were outlined to the leaders of the two drainage districts, who will arrange to explain the plans to landowners in the districts.

The plans.

No. 1 -- Consists of 1.5 miles of levee construction, and channel improvements. The total estimated structural measure installation cost is $4,632,078, with the federal cost estimated at $3,097,708 and local cost at $1,534,370, for an average of 67 per cent federal cost.

No. 2 -- Consists of 1.5 miles levee construction, with the same number of miles channel improvement, two additional ten by ten feet floodgates in the Birds Point-New Madrid Setback levee. The total cost estimate is $5,882,288, with federal cost of $3,989,709, and local cost of $1,892,580.

No. 3 -- Consists of 1.5 miles levee construction, 214 miles channel improvements, and 1,000 cubic feet per second capacity pumping plant. Total installation costs estimated at would be $7,870,788. Federal

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!
EVERY DAY IS TURKEY DAY

As usual, turkey will be the entree when American families sit down to eat their Thanksgiving Day dinner on Thursday, Nov. 24. Christmas provides another occasion for nationwide turkey consumption. Those two days used to be about the only bright spots of the year for breeders of the big gobblers. In recent years, though, turkey has come to be a staple instead of a holiday specialty food.

Around 116 million turkeys will be raised this year, an increase of 11 per cent over 1965. The Agriculture Department estimates that per capita consumption for the year will amount to no less than 7.8 pounds.

Aggressive promotion, improved packaging, and above all, low prices have contributed to the growing popularity of turkey. A five-pound bird will cost around $1.95 this year as against $2.75 in 1955. And chances are that today's bird will have more meat per pound than one of a decade ago, thanks to improved breeding techniques.

Convenience food producers can't seem to get enough turkey. In the first half of 1966, about 34 million pounds of ready-to-cook turkey were cut up for packages of parts and for TV dinners; 144 million pounds were used in frozen pot pies, boneless roasts and cooked turkey rolls.

None of this has been lost on growers of cranberries, the traditional partner of turkey on holiday tables. Cranberry cocktail and "cranapple" juice, two relatively new products, have proved so popular that they now take about 35 per cent of the largest producer's berries. A cranberry-cottage cheese salad, however, proved a flop. It came out looking purple.

THE ELECTIONS DOWN UNDER - Australia and New Zealand hold parliamentary elections on Saturday (Nov. 26).

IF LYNDON B. JOHNSON were to run for political office in Australia or New Zealand there would be no contest. Indeed cynics Down Under are calling President Johnson's recent rousing tour of Australia and New Zealand "the biggest political rally" ever held there.

Every indication is that Johnson's speeches will have a great effect on the elections in both countries on Saturday. Despite a good deal of sharply vocal dissent, both peoples seem heavily to support American policy in Viet Nam. What's more, polls show that they are willing to continue to pay the price of support - sending their own troops there.

Australia now has a 4500-strong task force fighting alongside Americans in Viet Nam. Our people can and do vouch that the Aussie is a resourceful, disciplined, and tough fighting man. Much smaller New Zealand has only an artillery unit with six guns in Viet Nam, but it is rendering also medical and economic aid. It is a safe bet that if both governments win the elections - and they are expected to do so handily - Americans will get more help in the Asian fighting.

THE LIBERAL -COUNTY - coalition government which has been in power in Australia since 1949 now holds a 22-seat majority over the Labor party in the 124-seat House of Representatives. If anything, this margin is expected to be increased.

In New Zealand the National party government, in power since 1960, is seeking a third three-year term. It holds 45 seats in the single chamber Parliament against 35 for the Labor party.

Labor in both countries would have been willing to play down the Viet Nam issue. Government leaders in both countries forced debate by pushing what they consider their biggest vote-getting issue, and President Johnson's triumphal tour has proved a valuable additional boost.

WHAT JOHNSON told the Aussies and the Kiwis in effect was: "We helped you in World War II, and we'll help you again." This was a transparent but extremely compelling appeal to the deep fear Down Under of the threat of invasion by Asian hordes. Unspoken was the corollary: "We expect you to help us now." Nevertheless, the message got across.

Australia particularly is flexing its muscles. The commonwealth - at once the world's largest island and smallest continent - continues to look to Western nations, and that more and more means the United States, for its protection. But it also intends to pursue a policy of self-help.

The 1966-67 budget, first since Harold E. Holt became Prime Minister this year, provides for defense spending of $1.1 billion. This may not sound like much by American terms, but it represents an increase of 34 per cent over the previous record outlay of 1965-66 and double the spending of two years ago.

Holt says in a recent interview: "The Australian people sleep much more securely at night because of their firm alliance with the United States of America. So it shouldn't be surprising for an Australian head of government to be giving as much encouragement as he possibly can to the American President and his colleagues in maintaining their resistance to aggression."

By Golly, There IS a Lot to Be Thankful For

The Reasons Are Timeless

Thanksgiving, to coin a phrase, ain't what it used to be.

The Pilgrims stalked and shot their own turkeys. Today, the center of attraction on the groaning board is prekilled, preplucked and prestuffed, if not precooked. It may even come in a homogenized loaf which, like a record of excerpts from musical masterpieces, has "all the hard parts taken out."

A century ago on Thanksgiving, we are told, the custom was to make an excursion into the country to visit one's grandparents. Today, grandma's house is as likely as not a high-rise apartment building and the children ride an elevator, not a horse-drawn carriage, to get there.

Half a century ago, the only holiday entertainment was what a family could provide for itself in the form of conversation and games and looking at pictures through the stereopticon. Today, television mass feeds our minds just as the modern food processing industry mass feeds our stomachs.

No, Thanksgiving isn't what it used to be. It hasn't been for a long time and it never will be again.

Yet it isn't Thanksgiving that has changed. America has changed, and is changing, but the reasons each generation continues to celebrate this festival are timeless and enduring.

Thanksgiving is, as it always was even before it became an official holiday, the one day in the year when Americans across the land pause from their daily work to gather within the bosom of their own families simply to give thanks.

To give thanks for many things. For big things—like a country that is free and prosperous and is still pursuing that great experiment called democracy. For little things—like a home, a full table, healthy kids and the wherewithal to maintain them.

And because we give special thanks on this day, we are perhaps more aware than on any other day that there are many, even in our own country, who have much less reason to be grateful. Our hearts go out to them, and like the Pilgrims who invited the Indians to the first Thanksgiving, we would share our happiness with them if we could.

America is changing, more rapidly with every year. If our ancestors from any previous period could come back to see what America is like in 1966, they might feel they had arrived on another planet.

But one thing would tell them they were at home. That one thing is the living spirit of Thanksgiving.

The Colonel Said: "When a married man begins to eat regularly in restaurants, it means trouble at home.

People aren't the only ones getting killed in increasing numbers on the nation's highways.

Deer are killed more frequently as new roads are pushed through near-forest areas and more traffic rolls down older highways.

More than twice as many deer as human beings died in road accidents last year, one estimate says. A game official in a western state assembled deer-auto accident statistics issued by state agencies throughout the nation. He discovered deer highway deaths totaled 96,000, as compared with 47,000 persons killed. The deer auto death rate was up 24 per cent over 1964.

To sportsmen, the deer highway toll means herds are depleted and some 4,800 tons of venison are wasted annually.

To motorists, the average collision with a deer, according to a Michigan study, means $200 in damages, possible injury and in some cases, death. In all, collisions with deer cost motorists nearly $20 million every year.

What can be done about it?

One system that originated in the Netherlands attempts to keep deer away from the highways at night. At known crossing points, stainless steel reflectors are put up; the theory is that a headlight beam striking the reflector will frighten the deer back into the woods.

Indiana officials reported a 75 per cent reduction in highway kills of deer in an area where the system was tried last year. One drawback: The Hoosier deer are whitetail, a variety that keeps to paths and trails, making location of the steel mirrors an easy choice.

In Western states, the more common mule deer is far less predictable in his choice of crossing spots.

APPEAL TO PARTICULAR GROUP

NEVER MAKE THE appeal in your headline and illustration that doesn't interest a particular group. No matter how large or small the group may be, the only way to reach them is by headline and copy that will interest them.

The words Notice, Attention, Now Is the Time, What You've Been Waiting For, are too general to attract any particular group. Besides such headlines say nothing.

When a retailer tries to reach everyone he talks to no one. The store's advertising is looking for someone who wants the product advertised. Any other person is wasted effort. Describe that product fully, telling the customer what to expect. To find the interested prospects is the newspaper's business, and it knows its business.

The Missouri State Highway Patrol is celebrating its thirty-fifth birthday this month.

From an original force of 55 men and a handful of civilian employees, the Patrol has grown to an organization of more than 1,000 persons.

The Patrol was created by an act passed by the Fifty-sixth General Assembly. The first Missouri State Highway Patrol assembled in Jefferson City on November 23, 1931, and were assigned to their respective patrol areas over the State. On the following day they began active duty on the highways.

The first Patrol superintendent was Lewis Ellis of Bethany, Missouri. It was Colonel Ellis who coined the phrase, "Gentlemen who enforce the law."

The superintendent is appointed by and serves at the pleasure of the governor. Colonel Ellis served for nearly two years, until a change of administration when Colonel B. M. Casteel was appointed to administer the department. Following Colonel Casteel as governor - appointed superintendents were Colonels M. S. Ginn, Hugh H. Waggoner, D. E. Harrison and E. L. (Mike) Hockaday.

Three men, Captains A. D. Sheppard, W. J. Ramsey and O. L. Wallis, have served as acting superintendents. This came about when one of the appointed superintendents resigned and two other administrators entered military service.

Of the original members of the Patrol, most have retired, resigned or passed away. Major C. M. Parker and Captain David E. Harrison, stationed at General Headquarters, Jefferson City, and Captain Paul M. Inman, Commander of Troop H, St. Joseph, are the only original troopers still active in the organization.

Colonel E. L. (Mike) Hockaday, the present Patrol superintendent, pointed out that these past superintendents deserve a great deal of credit for their efficient administration of the department, but equal credit goes to the many fine dedicated troopers who through their efforts have gained a reputation for the Missouri State Highway Patrol as one of the finest in the Nation.

THE ANSWER

What is the solution to this country's commercial transportation problem? Expert after expert, study group after study group, have found that it lies in equality of treatment for all forms of transportation.

So another question arises. To reach the objective, what is needed?

The President of the Association of American Railroads has provided a four-part answer to that question. The requirements are: 1. A drastic reduction in the regulatory restraints imposed on railroads, 2. A halt in discriminatory railroad taxation, 3. Equal rights for any carrier to diversity into other carriage and form general transportation companies offering across-the-board services by the best mode or combination for each movement., 4. Establishment of systems of adequate user charges for those carriers using public transport facilities provided at public expense, such as waterways and highways.

This program imposes no penalty on any carrier. It would simply require each to pay its own way and to offer rates reflecting the cost of providing service. It would eliminate regulatory practices which a changed competitive situation have made totally obsolete and highly destructive. It would permit the maximum use and development of technological innovations which would provide the ultimate in service at the lowest possible cost.

And, let it be stressed, that Congress and state legislatures are laggards for change.

YOU DO:

Suppose you work the standard eight hour day and are in an average income bracket. How much of that time goes to pay for elements that make up your cost of living?

Here are some examples: Food and tobacco cost one hour and 18 minutes; clothing and related items 30 minutes; recreation 19 minutes; transportation 39 minutes; medical expenses 21 minutes.

But there's another item that is bigger than any of these. It is taxes. They account for two hours and 20 minutes of your working time -- more than a quarter of the whole.

To put it another way, it means that you must work more than three months of each year before you begin earning money you can spend as you wish. Taxes take all that you make during that three-months-plus period.

The chances are that this will come as news to great numbers of people. They have small knowledge of the size and scope of the tax bill, the primary reasons being that many taxes are hidden in the cost of the goods and services we buy and that most individual income taxes are paid through the withholding system, rather than being personally paid to the government by the earner. But, realize it or not, they are the biggest single item of expense to most of us.

In sum -- who pays for big and wasteful government? You do!

TWELVE WAYS TO BECOME A BETTER SALES MANAGER

To smooth the way for newly promoted managers, IBM asked sales executives which problems had given them most trouble in their early months on the job. Their answers pinpoint the major challenges faced by all managers. Meet these challenges and your performance will improve.

(1) Don't jump into very sales situation you see going bad and try to mastermind the solution.
(2) Concentrate in the first few months on establishing a "communications environment."
(3) Learn to listen.
(4) Recognize that all salesmen must be motivated, and what works with one may not work with another.
(5) Don't "rail against" the administrative portion of your job.
(6) Set to work helping your men develop up to their greatest potential.
(7) Don't be afraid to make decisions in the early months.
(8) Oppose conformity -- in your men and in yourself.
(9) Think management.
(10) Set your standards high.
(11) Gradually "moderate" the close relationship you've had with salesmen.
(12) Work harder than ever.

Ralph Bunche is quoted as saying "There is no war -- minded people, it's war-- minded rulers." Past events has proven that to be a true question, what can be done about it?

H. L. Hunt Says

AID FOR THE ENEMY

Soviet Rusia is the sole true beneficiary of U.S. trade with or aid to the communist governments of Eastern Europe. Those most injured by such trade or aid are the mass populations of Eastern Europe.

Every one of these countries, at the time of its takeover by Russia, was more advanced economically than the Soviet Union. These countries have been systematically plundered by Russia. They remain a source of great benefits for Soviet imperialism.

"Helping people," regardless of their past record or their prospects for constructive self-help, has become almost a religion in America today. But the truth is that enslaved people are not helped by aid given to their masters. The only result of that kind of aid is to convince the slaves that the whole world is in league against them and they have no choice but to submit to their fate.

When such people see their masters getting help from the United States, they think they see communism working.

Only if the Eastern European satellites of Russia become more trouble to hold than they are worth is there a real chance of their throwing off the communist yoke. When we aid the satellites we make it easier for Russia to keep control through their puppet governments. That may not be our purpose, but that is how it works out in practice.

The hot war in Vietnam should not distract U.S. attention from the cold war that continues elsewhere in the world. Trade is a vital weapon in this war, and we are using it against ourselves. HLH

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- Excerpts from personal mail to and from a lot of people:

MAYOR JOHN LINDSAY, NEW YORK CITY -- Though you had nothing to do with it, I am sure you will want to know the facts in order to rectify a serious injustice. Living in your city is Isidore Zimmerman, who was inhumanely incarcerated in New York jails for 24 years, part of the time on death row. He was finally released when the full facts became known. Despite this, Judge Matthew Levy of the New York State Supreme Court, when called upon to set a trial date for Zimmerman's case against New York State for the recovery of damages, postponed the case further. It has now been dragging on for four years.

Twenty - four years is a long time to take out of a man's life in the first place. Four years is much too long to delay a restitution trial in the second place. Meanwhile Zimmerman has been able to get only sporadic work. He has already suffered enough. You, as a humane mayor of New York City, might see what you can do to expedite his case and rectify an injustice. New York courts can be humane or they can be boss - ridden. It looks as if the wrong bosses were now riding them.

ESTHER H. SIMMONS, LOS ANGELES, CALIF. -- It was merely a coincidence that Lt. Jerry Nugent was shipped home from Viet Nam five weeks after his brother, Pat, married the President's daughter. The Lieutenant had completed his 12 months in Viet Nam and was eligible to return. Before the wedding, however, the President spent the taxpayers' money to film a personal message from Lt. Nugent in Viet Nam. The film was rushed to the White House where the President showed it to the Nugents in his private projection room.

PFC. ROBERT MACKEY, FIRST CAVALRY DIVISION, VIET NAM -- The defense department following up our expose of GI gyps, has ordered a "full investigation" of automobile abuses. Servicemen who have lost money on shady auto transactions can also get free advice from their legal officer.

IRA JOHNSON, MILWAUKEE, WIS. -- The Allen - Bradley Corp., which buys the back page of the John Birch Society's magazine each month, may consider President Johnson pro-Communist but doesn't let this interfere with business. The company sells electronic equipment to the federal government, then uses the profits to promote right-wing causes. At last report, Fred Loock, the company president, was a power in the Birch Society and a member of its National Finance Committee.

ALICE GINN, DECATUR, GA. -- Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, D-N. Y., the Harlem Globetrotter, didn't have the worst attendance record in congress, though he missed five out of 10 key votes. Rep. James Martin, R-Ala., campaigning for Governor of Alabama, and Rep. James Morrison, D-La., campaigning for re - election in Louisiana, missed eight out of 10. Rep. Phil Landrum, D-Ga., and Rep. Ed Willis, D-La., who also faced tough primaries, missed seven of 10. Others with even worse records were absent because of illness. They included Herman Toll, D-Pa., Ralph Scott, D-N. C., Tom Murray, D-Tenn., Carleton King, R-N. Y., and Joe Martin, R-Mass.

REP. WILLIAM AYRES, AKRON, OHIO -- The fact that you have induced Rep. Adam Clayton Powell of Harlem, chairman of the education and labor committee, to allocate taxpayers' funds to pay for a purely political attack on the anti - poverty program, makes the facts even worse than those which we reported. It also explains the fact that you were the one member of the committee who championed Chairman Powell when he was being criticized by other members of the education and labor committee.

Chairman Powell has been able to use anti - poverty funds extensively in Harlem so it seems ironic that he would allow some of his committee funds to be diverted to you to attack anti - poverty. However, in view of the fact that you championed Powell when all members of your committee stripped him of his autocratic power makes this irony understandable.

PETE NIELSON, MALAD CITY, IDAHO -- It might be possible to grow crops on the moon in special greenhouses which would be needed to protect the plants from the severe temperatures (234 above at high noon to 234 below at midnight). Lunar explorers will bring back soil samples which will be tested for fertility.

ESTHER STEIN, PHILADELPHIA, Pa. -- You are right that industrial polution contaminates our environment worse than does auto fumes. It would cost an estimated $100 million a year just to control the pollution from the nation's pulp and paper mills. Management claims it can't show a profit from making our air and water purer, so the air - breathing and water-drinking public show a deficit.

WILLIAM CURTIS, PALM BEACH, FLA. -- Admirers of Sen. William Fulbright, D-Ark., pushed him for the Nobel Peace Prize. He didn't lobby for the honor himself. It was a pure coincidence that he happened to be lecturing in Sweden about the time that the Nobel Prize committee was considering candidates in next - door Norway.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Reuther Spending Millions On Special Projects While Waiting Chance to Launch Own Labor Federation.

Washington, D. C.: -- There are very few authentic Reutherologists.

But from the handful of men who claim such distinction because of their intimacy with the rusty - haired Detroit labor leader comes word that Walter Reuther had personally attempted to launch a massive independent labor movement earlier this month. Its jurisdiction would have been the entire North American continent -- from Hudson Bay to the south of old Mexico.

Money would have been no problem. With $10 million in the treasuries of organizations he controls, his projects today have a healthier gold flow than the government.

For some time now the restless Detroiter has been eager to bolt the AFL and revive the old CIO which he headed until both sides merged in '55.

In the merged AFL-CIO he is a minority of one, though his union paid it $965,735.54 in per capita dues for the year ending June 30, 1965. With this money he could run his own central labor headquarters in Washington.

A few days before labor's high command was scheduled to meet here on Nov. 14 for a showdown on foreign policy, Reuther personally telephoned some of the old militants who were with him in the late Congress of Industrial Organizations (CIO). Until now these private conservations have gone unreported.

He asked the labor leaders confidentially if they would break with the patriarchal American Federation of Labor now about 80 years old. He spoke to the men who, like himself, disagreed sharply with the tough inflexible policy of rugged, cigar chewing, fire breathing George Meany on relations with the East, Near and Far. Reuther and the men he telephoned are for recognition of Red China, a two-China policy in the UN, and cordial exchanges and trade with Eastern Europe.

In their talks with Reuther over the phone lines, one or two of his colleagues gave Meany's position a verbal hosing. But, they told Reuther, foreign policy was not the issue on which to make a fight. Perhaps some other battle line could be firmed up for the Feb. 20, 1967, high command session in Florida. But not now.

Furthermore, George Meany, 72 years or no 72 years, had outmeaneuvered Reuther. The AFL-CIO president simply rounded up all the important foreign resolutions adopted by the AFL-CIO since Dec. 1955. These were mimeographed and put in a 35-page booklet called "Resume of AFL-CIO International Policies, Dec. 1955 to Aug. 1966." This was sent to the other 28 members of the AFL-CIO Executive Council some 10 days before they were to meet.

This booklet, soon to be published as a pamphlet, proved one thing: with the exception of one resolution, Walter Reuther had approved AFL-CIO tough foreign policy statements for 11 years. How could he argue against himself now?

That's why he boycotted the session. But he was not idle. He spent the week preparing to go independent -- on the issues. He is not ready to bolt the AFL-CIO yet. Not alone.

But he'll be busy. For example, at the end of the month he and younger brother Victor plan to fly down to Mexico. They will help revitalize something Victor set up there in February -- "The National Labor Council For Auto Workers in the Republic of Mexico." This is part of the Reuthers' global unionism reaching right across to Japan. In Mexico, it includes the workers at all six big auto companies.

For this sort of world - wide operation Reuther has some $3.5 million in his International Solidarity Fund.

The Reuthers work with similar councils on all continents and have dispatched their specialists all the way to Australia in the past year.

On the home front, Reuther plans to plunge more heavily into his own poverty program. With a million dollars donated by the United Auto Workers, Reuther's Citizens' Crusage Against Poverty is functioning smoothly in hundreds of communities. Now it has plans to expand -- and is raising another $3 million.

Nor is he ignoring the industrial front -- including what he calls "factories in the fields" (agriculture). This area he covers through the Industrial Union Dept., a fast moving combine of unions with a liquid treasury of over $3.5 million.

Thus he has freedom of action and the cash to pay for it. He'll use both, as the headlines soon will prove, while awaiting allies to join him in taking a walk out of the merged federation of labor.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!
EVERY DAY IS TURKEY DAY

As usual, turkey will be the entree when American families sit down to eat their Thanksgiving Day dinner on Thursday, Nov. 24. Christmas provides another occasion for nationwide turkey consumption. Those two days used to be about the only bright spots of the year for breeders of the big gobblers. In recent years, though, turkey has come to be a staple instead of a holiday specialty food.

Around 116 million turkeys will be raised this year, an increase of 11 per cent over 1965. The Agriculture Department estimates that per capita consumption for the year will amount to no less than 7.8 pounds.

Aggressive promotion, improved packaging, and above all, low prices have contributed to the growing popularity of turkey. A five-pound bird will cost around $1.95 this year as against $2.75 in 1955. And chances are that today's bird will have more meat per pound than one of a decade ago, thanks to improved breeding techniques.

Convenience food producers can't seem to get enough turkey. In the first half of 1966, about 34 million pounds of ready-to-cook turkey were cut up for packages of parts and for TV dinners; 144 million pounds were used in frozen pot pies, boneless roasts and cooked turkey rolls.

None of this has been lost on growers of cranberries, the traditional partner of turkey on holiday tables. Cranberry cocktail and "cranapple" juice, two relatively new products, have proved so popular that they now take about 35 per cent of the largest producer's berries. A cranberry-cottage cheese salad, however, proved a flop. It came out looking purple.

THE ELECTIONS DOWN UNDER - Australia and New Zealand hold parliamentary elections on Saturday (Nov. 26).

IF LYNDON B. JOHNSON were to run for political office in Australia or New Zealand there would be no contest. Indeed cynics Down Under are calling President Johnson's recent rousing tour of Australia and New Zealand "the biggest political rally" ever held there.

Every indication is that Johnson's speeches will have a great effect on the elections in both countries on Saturday. Despite a good deal of sharply vocal dissent, both peoples seem heavily to support American policy in Viet Nam. What's more, polls show that they are willing to continue to pay the price of support - sending their own troops there.

Australia now has a 4500-strong task force fighting alongside Americans in Viet Nam. Our people can and do vouch that the Aussie is a resourceful, disciplined, and tough fighting man. Much smaller New Zealand has only an artillery unit with six guns in Viet Nam, but it is rendering also medical and economic aid. It is a safe bet that if both governments win the elections - and they are expected to do so handily - Americans will get more help in the Asian fighting.

THE LIBERAL -COUNTY - coalition government which has been in power in Australia since 1949 now holds a 22-seat majority over the Labor party in the 124-seat House of Representatives. If anything, this margin is expected to be increased.

In New Zealand the National party government, in power since 1960, is seeking a third three-year term. It holds 45 seats in the single chamber Parliament against 35 for the Labor party.

Labor in both countries would have been willing to play down the Viet Nam issue. Government leaders in both countries forced debate by pushing what they consider their biggest vote-getting issue, and President Johnson's triumphal tour has proved a valuable additional boost.

WHAT JOHNSON told the Aussies and the Kiwis in effect was: "We helped you in World War II, and we'll help you again." This was a transparent but extremely compelling appeal to the deep fear Down Under of the threat of invasion by Asian hordes. Unspoken was the corollary: "We expect you to help us now." Nevertheless, the message got across.

Australia particularly is flexing its muscles. The commonwealth - at once the world's largest island and smallest continent - continues to look to Western nations, and that more and more means the United States, for its protection. But it also intends to pursue a policy of self-help.

The 1966-67 budget, first since Harold E. Holt became Prime Minister this year, provides for defense spending of $1.1 billion. This may not sound like much by American terms, but it represents an increase of 34 per cent over the previous record outlay of 1965-66 and double the spending of two years ago.

Holt says in a recent interview: "The Australian people sleep much more securely at night because of their firm alliance with the United States of America. So it shouldn't be surprising for an Australian head of government to be giving as much encouragement as he possibly can to the American President and his colleagues in maintaining their resistance to aggression."

By Golly, There IS a Lot to Be Thankful For

The Reasons Are Timeless

Thanksgiving, to coin a phrase, ain't what it used to be.

The Pilgrims stalked and shot their own turkeys. Today, the center of attraction on the groaning board is prekilled, preplucked and prestuffed, if not precooked. It may even come in a homogenized loaf which, like a record of excerpts from musical masterpieces, has "all the hard parts taken out."

A century ago on Thanksgiving, we are told, the custom was to make an excursion into the country to visit one's grandparents. Today, grandma's house is as likely as not a high-rise apartment building and the children ride an elevator, not a horse-drawn carriage, to get there.

Half a century ago, the only holiday entertainment was what a family could provide for itself in the form of conversation and games and looking at pictures through the stereopticon. Today, television mass feeds our minds just as the modern food processing industry mass feeds our stomachs.

No, Thanksgiving isn't what it used to be. It hasn't been for a long time and it never will be again.

Yet it isn't Thanksgiving that has changed. America has changed, and is changing, but the reasons each generation continues to celebrate this festival are timeless and enduring.

Thanksgiving is, as it always was even before it became an official holiday, the one day in the year when Americans across the land pause from their daily work to gather within the bosom of their own families simply to give thanks.

To give thanks for many things. For big things—like a country that is free and prosperous and is still pursuing that great experiment called democracy. For little things—like a home, a full table, healthy kids and the wherewithal to maintain them.

And because we give special thanks on this day, we are perhaps more aware than on any other day that there are many, even in our own country, who have much less reason to be grateful. Our hearts go out to them, and like the Pilgrims who invited the Indians to the first Thanksgiving, we would share our happiness with them if we could.

America is changing, more rapidly with every year. If our ancestors from any previous period could come back to see what America is like in 1966, they might feel they had arrived on another planet.

But one thing would tell them they were at home. That one thing is the living spirit of Thanksgiving.

The Colonel Said: "When a married man begins to eat regularly in restaurants, it means trouble at home.

People aren't the only ones getting killed in increasing numbers on the nation's highways.

Deer are killed more frequently as new roads are pushed through near-forest areas and more traffic rolls down older highways.

More than twice as many deer as human beings died in road accidents last year, one estimate says. A game official in a western state assembled deer-auto accident statistics issued by state agencies throughout the nation. He discovered deer highway deaths totaled 96,000, as compared with 47,000 persons killed. The deer auto death rate was up 24 per cent over 1964.

To sportsmen, the deer highway toll means herds are depleted and some 4,800 tons of venison are wasted annually.

To motorists, the average collision with a deer, according to a Michigan study, means $200 in damages, possible injury and in some cases, death. In all, collisions with deer cost motorists nearly $20 million every year.

What can be done about it?

One system that originated in the Netherlands attempts to keep deer away from the highways at night. At known crossing points, stainless steel reflectors are put up; the theory is that a headlight beam striking the reflector will frighten the deer back into the woods.

Indiana officials reported a 75 per cent reduction in highway kills of deer in an area where the system was tried last year. One drawback: The Hoosier deer are whitetail, a variety that keeps to paths and trails, making location of the steel mirrors an easy choice.

In Western states, the more common mule deer is far less predictable in his choice of crossing spots.

APPEAL TO PARTICULAR GROUP

NEVER MAKE THE appeal in your headline and illustration that doesn't interest a particular group. No matter how large or small the group may be, the only way to reach them is by headline and copy that will interest them.

The words Notice, Attention, Now Is the Time, What You've Been Waiting For, are too general to attract any particular group. Besides such headlines say nothing.

When a retailer tries to reach everyone he talks to no one. The store's advertising is looking for someone who wants the product advertised. Any other person is wasted effort. Describe that product fully, telling the customer what to expect. To find the interested prospects is the newspaper's business, and it knows its business.

The Missouri State Highway Patrol is celebrating its thirty-fifth birthday this month.

From an original force of 55 men and a handful of civilian employees, the Patrol has grown to an organization of more than 1,000 persons.

The Patrol was created by an act passed by the Fifty-sixth General Assembly. The first Missouri State Highway Patrol assembled in Jefferson City on November 23, 1931, and were assigned to their respective patrol areas over the State. On the following day they began active duty on the highways.

The first Patrol superintendent was Lewis Ellis of Bethany, Missouri. It was Colonel Ellis who coined the phrase, "Gentlemen who enforce the law."

The superintendent is appointed by and serves at the pleasure of the governor. Colonel Ellis served for nearly two years, until a change of administration when Colonel B. M. Casteel was appointed to administer the department. Following Colonel Casteel as governor - appointed superintendents were Colonels M. S. Ginn, Hugh H. Waggoner, D. E. Harrison and E. L. (Mike) Hockaday.

Three men, Captains A. D. Sheppard, W. J. Ramsey and O. L. Wallis, have served as acting superintendents. This came about when one of the appointed superintendents resigned and two other administrators entered military service.

Of the original members of the Patrol, most have retired, resigned or passed away. Major C. M. Parker and Captain David E. Harrison, stationed at General Headquarters, Jefferson City, and Captain Paul M. Inman, Commander of Troop H, St. Joseph, are the only original troopers still active in the organization.

Colonel E. L. (Mike) Hockaday, the present Patrol superintendent, pointed out that these past superintendents deserve a great deal of credit for their efficient administration of the department, but equal credit goes to the many fine dedicated troopers who through their efforts have gained a reputation for the Missouri State Highway Patrol as one of the finest in the Nation.

THE ANSWER

What is the solution to this country's commercial transportation problem? Expert after expert, study group after study group, have found that it lies in equality of treatment for all forms of transportation.

So another question arises. To reach the objective, what is needed?

The President of the Association of American Railroads has provided a four-part answer to that question. The requirements are: 1. A drastic reduction in the regulatory restraints imposed on railroads, 2. A halt in discriminatory railroad taxation, 3. Equal rights for any carrier to diversity into other carriage and form general transportation companies offering across-the-board services by the best mode or combination for each movement., 4. Establishment of systems of adequate user charges for those carriers using public transport facilities provided at public expense, such as waterways and highways.

This program imposes no penalty on any carrier. It would simply require each to pay its own way and to offer rates reflecting the cost of providing service. It would eliminate regulatory practices which a changed competitive situation have made totally obsolete and highly destructive. It would permit the maximum use and development of technological innovations which would provide the ultimate in service at the lowest possible cost.

And, let it be stressed, that Congress and state legislatures are laggards for change.

YOU DO:

Suppose you work the standard eight hour day and are in an average income bracket. How much of that time goes to pay for elements that make up your cost of living?

Here are some examples: Food and tobacco cost one hour and 18 minutes; clothing and related items 30 minutes; recreation 19 minutes; transportation 39 minutes; medical expenses 21 minutes.

But there's another item that is bigger than any of these. It is taxes. They account for two hours and 20 minutes of your working time -- more than a quarter of the whole.

To put it another way, it means that you must work more than three months of each year before you begin earning money you can spend as you wish. Taxes take all that you make during that three-months-plus period.

The chances are that this will come as news to great numbers of people. They have small knowledge of the size and scope of the tax bill, the primary reasons being that many taxes are hidden in the cost of the goods and services we buy and that most individual income taxes are paid through the withholding system, rather than being personally paid to the government by the earner. But, realize it or not, they are the biggest single item of expense to most of us.

In sum -- who pays for big and wasteful government? You do!

TWLEVE WAYS TO BECOME A BETTER SALES MANAGER

To smooth the way for newly promoted managers, IBM asked sales executives which problems had given them most trouble in their early months on the job. Their answers pinpoint the major challenges faced by all managers. Meet these challenges and your performance will improve.

(1) Don't jump into very sales situation you see going bad and try to mastermind the solution.

(2) Concentrate in the first few months on establishing a "communications environment."

(3) Learn to listen.

(4) Recognize that all salesmen must be motivated, and what works with one may not work with another.

(5) Don't "rail against" the administrative portion of your job.

(6) Set to work helping your men develop up to their greatest potential.

(7) Don't be afraid to make decisions in the early months.

(8) Oppose conformity -- in your men and in yourself.

(9) Think management.

(10) Set your standards high.

(11) Gradually "moderate" the close relationship you've had with salesmen.

(12) Work harder than ever.

Doc. Duncan Says

Ralph Bunche is quoted as saying "There is no war -- minded people, it's war-minded rulers." Past events has proven that to be a true question, what can be done about it?

Evidently there is only one solution, and our present high school and college students are showing unmistakable signs of doing just that. See to it that people have the last say in all important matters, from dog catcher to president.

H. L. Hunt Says

AID FOR THE ENEMY

Soviet Rusia is the sole true beneficiary of U.S. trade with or aid to the communist governments of Eastern Europe. Those most injured by such trade or aid are the mass populations of Eastern Europe.

Every one of these countries, at the time of its takeover by Russia, was more advanced economically than the Soviet Union. These countries have been systematically plundered by Russia. They remain a source of great benefits for Soviet imperialism.

"Helping people," regardless of their past record or their prospects for constructive self-help, has become almost a religion in America today. But the truth is that enslaved people are not helped by aid given to their masters. The only result of that kind of aid is to convince the slaves that the whole world is in league against them and they have no choice but to submit to their fate.

When such people see their masters getting help from the United States, they think they see communism working.

Only if the Eastern European satellites of Russia become more trouble to hold than they are worth is there a real chance of their throwing off the communist yoke. When we aid the satellites we make it easier for Russia to keep control through their puppet governments. That may not be our purpose, but that is how it works out in practice.

The hot war in Vietnam should not distract U.S. attention from the cold war that continues elsewhere in the world. Trade is a vital weapon in this war, and we are using it against ourselves. HLH

Washington Merry - Go - Round

WASHINGTON -- Excerpts from personal mail to and from a lot of people:

MAYOR JOHN LINDSAY, NEW YORK CITY -- Though you had nothing to do with it, I am sure you will want to know the facts in order to rectify a serious injustice. Living in your city is Isidore Zimmerman, who was inhumanely incarcerated in New York jails for 24 years, part of the time on death row. He was finally released when the full facts became known. Despite this, Judge Matthew Levy of the New York State Supreme Court, when called upon to set a trial date for Zimmerman's case against New York State for the recovery of damages, postponed the case further. It has now been dragging on for four years.

Twenty - four years is a long time to take out of a man's life in the first place. Four years is much too long to delay a restitution trial in the second place. Meanwhile Zimmerman has been able to get only sporadic work. He has already suffered enough. You, as a humane mayor of New York City, might see what you can do to expedite his case and rectify an injustice. New York courts can be humane or they can be boss - ridden. It looks as if the wrong bosses were now riding them.

This was sent to the other 28 members of the AFL-CIO Executive Council some 10 days before they were to meet.

This booklet, soon to be published as a pamphlet, proved one thing: with the exception of one resolution, Walter Reuther had approved AFL-CIO tough foreign policy statements for 11 years. How could he argue against himself now?

That's why he boycotted the session. But he was not idle. He spent the week preparing to go independent -- on the issues. He is not ready to bolt the AFL-CIO yet. Not alone.

But he'll be busy. For example, at the end of the month he and younger brother Victor plan to fly down to Mexico. They will help revitalize something Victor set up there in February -- "The National Labor Council For Auto Workers in the Republic of Mexico." This is part of the Reuthers' global unionism reaching right across to Japan. In Mexico, it includes the workers at all six big auto companies.

For this sort of world - wide operation Reuther has some $3.5 million in his International Solidarity Fund.

The Reuthers work with similar councils on all continents and have dispatched their specialists all the way to Australia in the past year.

On the home front, Reuther plans to plunge more heavily into his own poverty program. With a million dollars donated by the United Auto Workers, Reuther's Citizens' Crusage Against Poverty is functioning smoothly in hundreds of communities. Now it has plans to expand -- and is raising another $3 million.

Nor is he ignoring the industrial front -- including what he calls "factories in the fields" (agriculture). This area he covers through the Industrial Union Dept., a fast moving combine of unions with a liquid treasury of over $3.5 million.

Thus he has freedom of action and the cash to pay for it. He'll use both, as the headlines soon will prove, while awaiting allies to join him in taking a walk out of the merged federation of labor.

CAPE GIRARDEAU - A tea honoring Miss Kay Margraf was given Saturday afternoon by Mrs. L.R. Seabaugh and her daughter, Miss Susan Seabaugh, 811 East Rodney.

The tea table was laid with a white lace appliqued table cloth on which was placed a three branched candelabra holding three tall white tapers. The table was centered with an arrangement of white chrysanthemums in a silver bowl. Serving were Mrs. Gale Heise and daughter, Miss Della Heise, Mrs. Fred Springer and daughter, Miss Sue Springer, Mrs. Clarence H. Webb and Miss Sharon Sievers.

Miss Margraf is the bride-elect of Albert Clay Ancell. The wedding will take place Friday at the First Presbyterian church. Miss Margraf is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Margraf, 101 North Ellis. Ancell is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Ancell of Sikeston.

An old Wyoming rancher was being questioned about the early days. "I suppose you ranchers hated to see homesteaders come?"

"No, we were glad to see them."

"Glad? I thought the cattlemen tried to run 'em off!"

The old fellow shook his head. "We helped them settle. Homesteading meant families and kids, so seven of us ranchers got together and built them a schoolhouse and sent off for a teacher." There was a twinkle in his eyes. "And then us ranchers married the first seven teachers."

Pilgrims' Dinner Would Be Expensive Today

NEW YORK (AP) — All that talk about the good old days, forget it. If you ate like the Pilgrims, Thursday's Thanksgiving dinner would cost you about three times as much.

And you would have to skip the cranberries and pumpkin pie.

Once wild turkeys were plentiful near Plimoth Plantation in Massachusetts, and bear and venison were mainstays for dinner.

But now wild turkey is $2.35a pound, native black bear roast $3.50, and venison back roast $2.55.

If you wanted to throw a little 17th-century Thanksgiving dinner for 142-52 colonists and 90 Indians — it would cost you $678.76, or $4.78 a person. That's with wild turkey, venison, bear, mussels, eels and succotash.

If you'd settle for the traditional 20th-century version, you could scrape by for $214.77 — $1.51 a person. That's for just plain turkey, dressing, cranberry sauce, pumpkin pie and all that.

You might want to do without wild rice, though. There was too much water in Minnesota's lakes this year, and the wild rice grown there is selling for $9.33 a pound, nearly double the price of a year ago.

In New England, they say, Gov. William Bradford proclaimed the first Thanksgiving in 1621. In Virginia, where everything is a little older, they say the first celebration was at Jamestown in 1619.

The Pilgrims didn't leave any engraved menus around. Neither did their Indian guests. The experts can only guess what they ate.

The good ladies at Plimoth Plantation, the reconstructed village in Massachusetts, have turned up a letter Edward Winslow wrote in December 1621, telling of fish and fowl in abundance, eels in September, mussels, grapes — both red and white, and Indians who brought oysters.

Bradford Smith, a descendant of the governor, says there were wild turkeys, eels, fish, corn bread and wine, but no potatoes and probably no onions, cranberries, pie or sugar.

Other historians talk about roast turkey, venison, bear, geese, ducks, fish, corn bread, nuts, succotash, journey cake, corn pumpkins and honey.

The Associated Press took this shopping list to a supermaket chain and a New York store that sells gourmet foods to see how much the 17th-century dinner would cost today.

The bill, rounded off, adds up to 17 cents for each guest for oysters, 17 more for eels, 6 for mussels, 10 for corn on the cob, 3 for pumpkin squash, 4 for honey, 5 for red grapes and 10 for white, 24 for walnuts, and 60 cents for wine.

Wild turkey adds 94 cents, native black bear roasts $1.16 and venison 84.

Add 5 more cents for corn muffins, the closest thing a supermarket has to New England journey cake, 11 cents for codfish and 12 cents for succotash -- canned Brunswick stew to mollify the Virginians.

It adds up to a lot more than what usually is cited as the most expensive Thanksgiving dinner in modern times--$2.15 per person back in 1951.

"Chivalry," said a little boy after studying knighthood in school, "is going around releasing beautiful maidens from other men's castles, and taking them to your own castle."

Mrs. Allen Is Hostess at Class Meeting

Mrs. Greta Allen was hostess to the Willing Workers class of Murray Lane Baptist church for the monthly meeting Nov. 14. There were 13 members and two visitors present.

Mrs. Barbara Rodgers led the opening prayer.

Mrs. Allen read the minutes of the October meeting and they were approved. The class voted to find a needy family and bring gifts for them to the next meeting instead of exchanging gifts among the class members.

Mrs. Carolyn Hileman gave the devotional and led in closing prayer.

Mrs. Mary Ann Litzelfelner served refreshments.

Wild turkey adds 94 cents, native black bear roasts $1.16 and venison 84.

Add 5 more cents for corn muffins, the closest thing a supermarket has to New England journey cake, 11 cents for codfish and 12 cents for succotash -- canned Brunswick stew to mollify the Virginians.

It adds up to a lot more than what usually is cited as the most expensive Thanksgiving dinner in modern times--$2.15 per person back in 1951.

Mrs. Allen Is Hostess at Class Meeting

Mrs. Greta Allen was hostess to the Willing Workers class of Murray Lane Baptist church for the monthly meeting Nov. 14. There were 13 members and two visitors present.

Mrs. Barbara Rodgers led the opening prayer.

Mrs. Allen read the minutes of the October meeting and they were approved. The class voted to find a needy family and bring gifts for them to the next meeting instead of exchanging gifts among the class members.

Mrs. Carolyn Hileman gave the devotional and led in closing prayer.

Mrs. Mary Ann Litzelfelner served refreshments.

Lilbourn Slaps Parma

LILBOURN -- A deadly zone press, superb defense, and excellent shooting sparked the host Panthers to a double win over the Parma Pirates, 20-18 in the B game, and 54-37 in the A contest.

Visiting Parma seemed to be defeated before the opening tip. The Pirate quintet showed no hustle or desire in their pre-game warm-up.

The Pirate A squad was not aggressive as they had already won the game to their way of thinking.

Lilbourn took the opening tip, dribbled down the floor passed the ball until it had a good shot and cashed in on the goal and the lead for good.

As in the last game, the Parma quintet had trouble with the zone press, the Panthers opened the game with such a press and before the crowd knew it, the Panthers had raced to a 6-0 lead and were on their way to a very convincing victory.

Parma used a zone type defense, something out of the ordinary, like a gap defense used in football, but its effectiveness was slight as the Panthers moved the ball for that good 10 to 15 foot shot and cashed in on them all but twice in the first half.

The zone defense employed by the host Panthers held the visitors to only one free throw in the first three minutes of play.

Lilbourn effectively used its ball control offense and man-to-man defense.

Parma's first point came with 4:08 minutes left in the first period, making the score read, 8-1, in favor of the host.

The most surprising thing about the game was that the Lilbourn squad dominated the rebounding over the much taller Parma quintet.

The first quarter ended with the Panthers on top, 13-1.

Parma was kept in the game the first half by the rebounding of Jerry Foster, who also paced the Pirates quintet in scoring the first half.

It was all Lilbourn the first half, with the Panther's controlling the rebounding, offense, and spirit.

Brad Blankenship, Panther defensive specialist, held the Pirates high scoring, Henry Lutes to three points, while collecting six points himself.

Lilbourn came out ready to go in the second half and found a Parma full court press to their likeing as they scored two quick buckets before the Pirates defense tightened and held the remaining of the half.

Larry McClung, Parma guard, collected 11 points the second half to keep the Pirates from an almost humiliating defeat. Lilbourn held a 42-22 lead going into the final quarter.

The Panthers opened the fourth period playing a sort of semi-stall ball, forcing the visitors into a fouling situation.

Parma fought back in the final quarter, getting to within 14 points of the forerunners.

The visitors had their trouble in the "B" game as they were able to muster up only three points the first half while the host collected 16.

Both teams were defensive minded the third period, as Parma held the host to no score while they collected three points.

Parma's fourth quarter surge fell short two points as they outscored the host 12-4, holding them to only four free throws. Parma's hopes ended as James Beans was attempting to get a shot away.

Mike Damback netted six points in pacing the host to their "B" victory while James Beans and Harold Walker collected five points each for Parma.

Crouthers sacked up 16 points in leading the Lilbourn quintet to their win. Larry McClung ended the game with 13 points, taking high scoring honors for Parma.

Poll and Bowl Chances At Stake Thursday

By RON RAPOPORT

Nebraska's poll chances and Texas' bowl chances will be at stake Thursday when both clubs close out their regular college football seasons with traditional Thanksgiving Day contests.

The Cornhuskers, No. 4 in this week's Associated Press college football poll, could conceivably improve on their position with a convincing victory over Oklahoma and a little luck.

And the Longhorns will reportedly be offered the host berth to play Mississippi in the Bluebonnet Bowl Dec. 17 in Houston if they beat Texas A&M Thursday.

Nebraska is 9-0 this season and will play Alabama, 8-0 and the No. 3 team, in the Sugar Bowl. The Crimson Tide appears to be a sure thing against Southern Mississippi on Saturday, but could have a little rougher time against Auburn the following week.

Notre Dame, No. 1, takes on a rugged Southern California club Saturday and an upset or close contest in that game, coupled with a strong Nebraska showing Thursday, could pave the way for a Cornhusker advance in the poll. Michigan State, No. 2, is through for the season.

Oklahoma, however, may be no pushover for Nebraska. The Sooners won their first four games of the season before succumbing to Notre Dame. They are 5-3 over-all now after a close 10-7 loss to Missouri last week.

As for Texas, their bowl chances were revealed by the Austin American Tuesday and Coach Darrell Royal confirmed that "we have been talking with some people."

The club held a special meeting Monday and voted to accept a Bluebonnet bid if it is offered. Texas in only 5-4, but if it beats the Aggies it will have won its last three in a row, including a 26-14 victory over Baylor.

Texas A&M is 4-1-1 over-all and is tied with Texas for third place in the Southwest Conference is a 4-2 mark.

Morehouse Falls To Richland 81-72

ESSEX - The rising Richland Rebels won their second game of the season last night, handing the Morehouse Tigers an 81-72 defeat. Richland's junior varsity squad mauled the young Tigers 68-30.

Richland had its troubles in the first quarter as the Tigers stayed with the host for a 14-13 first period lead. The second and third quarters proved costly for the visitors as the Rebels scored a combined total of 43 points while holding the visitors to 30.

Allan Kelly wheeled for 22 points while teammate Randy Fowler poured in 20 points in leading the Rebels' offensive attack.

Larry Hurley netted 17 points in leading the Tiger quintet.

The Rebels big center, six foot five Jones, poured in 31 points in leading the Rebels junior varsity squad to a rousing win. Sullivan netted nine points to lead the Tigers.

STEELE -- South Pemiscot spoiled Southland's basketball season debut last night by handing the visiting Rebels a 60-45 setback in non-conference play on the Bulldog court.

The scrappy Rebels trailed 8-7 at the close of the first quarter, 26-22 at the half and 40-35 after three period but could not match the pace of the more experienced Bulldogs in the final frame. Lanny Tyler and Gary Coleman each collected 18 points to pace the winners. Johnny Staggs sank 14 and Jerry Smith hit 13 for the losers.

South Pemiscot also took a narrow 40-38 win in the earlier B-game behind a 17-point performance by Kifer. Lance Monroe was high for Southland with 10 tallies.

Run For The Turkey Thursday At Dallas

By HAL BOCK

While most of the country sits back and digests that big Thanksgiving Day turkey, Bob Lilly and the rest of the Dallas Cowboys' defensive line will try to gobble up Cleveland's twin running terrors: Leroy Kelly and Ernie Green.

Dallas, tied for the National Football League's Eastern Conference lead with St. Louis, hosts the third-place Browns in the key clash of a three-game holiday pro football schedule. In another NFL game, San Francisco plays at Detroit. In the American League, Buffalo visits Oakland.

Lilly is the 6-foot-5, 255-pound tackle who anchors the Cowboys' defensive line. Last Sunday he lowered the boom four times on Pittsburgh quarterback Ron Smith as the Cowboys beat the Steelers 20-7.

On Thursday Lilly will have to concern himself not only with Frank Ryan, Cleveland's fine quarterback, but also with Kelly and Green, who've given the Browns a potent running attack.

Kelly rushed for 100 yards in Cleveland's 14-3 victory over Washington last week and took the NFL lead. He has gained 830 yards in 157 attempts and scored 10 touchdowns. Green is fourth in rushing with 640 yards in 117 attempts.

San Francisco will try to bounce back from a tough 35-34 loss to Philadelphia but the 49ers will have to find a defense for the NFL's newest place kicking sensation, Garo Yepremian.

Yepremian, the left - footed soccer - type Cypriot kicker, booted two field goals as the Lions upset Baltimore 20-14 last Sunday.

Buffalo, leading the AFL's Eastern Division by a full game, can put more distance between itself and pursuing Boston and New York.

But the Bills will have a battle on their hands against the Raiders, who've won six of their last seven and jumped into second place in the Western Division.

The other pro teams play Sunday. In the National League, Atlanta is at Chicago, Green Bay visits Minnesota, Los Angeles takes on Baltimore, New York is at Washington and Pittsburgh takes on St. Louis.

In the American League, New York entertains Kansas City, San Diego is at Denver and Boston plays at Miami.

Novelist Fannie Hurst tells this story on herself. While dining out one night, she ran into a friend whom she hadn't seen for some time -- not since she'd embarked on a rigid slimming program. He didn't recognize her at all. "Don't you remember me?" she asked. "It's the same old Fannie Hurst you knew years ago."

"No," he said. "It might be the same old Hurst, but it sure isn't the same old fanny."

Scott City Has Trouble With Woodland

LUTESVILLE - Scott City's Rams overcame a 40-37 half deficit last night and kept their unbeaten record intact by pulling out an 84-76 basketball victory over the host Woodland Cardinals.

The winners were paced by Crabtree, Sanford and Paine, who drilled 26, 22 and 21 points respectively, as the Rams surged in front in the third quarter and held on for their third victory of the young season.

Game scoring honors, went to Crader, who poured in 41 points for Woodland. Hahn added 25 more to the Cardinal attack.

Scott City also chalked up a 62-44 win in the preliminary B game to complete a two-game sweep behind a 20-point effort by Gibson. Keith topped the losers with 11.

Run For The Turkey Thursday At Dallas

By HAL BOCK

While most of the country sits back and digests that big Thanksgiving Day turkey, Bob Lilly and the rest of the Dallas Cowboys' defensive line will try to gobble up Cleveland's twin running terrors: Leroy Kelly and Ernie Green.

Dallas, tied for the National Football League's Eastern Conference lead with St. Louis, hosts the third-place Browns in the key clash of a three-game holiday pro football schedule. In another NFL game, San Francisco plays at Detroit. In the American League, Buffalo visits Oakland.

Lilly is the 6-foot-5, 255-pound tackle who anchors the Cowboys' defensive line. Last Sunday he lowered the boom four times on Pittsburgh quarterback Ron Smith as the Cowboys beat the Steelers 20-7.

On Thursday Lilly will have to concern himself not only with Frank Ryan, Cleveland's fine quarterback, but also with Kelly and Green, who've given the Browns a potent running attack.

Kelly rushed for 100 yards in Cleveland's 14-3 victory over Washington last week and took the NFL lead. He has gained 830 yards in 157 attempts and scored 10 touchdowns. Green is fourth in rushing with 640 yards in 117 attempts.

San Francisco will try to bounce back from a tough 35-34 loss to Philadelphia but the 49ers will have to find a defense for the NFL's newest place kicking sensation, Garo Yepremian.

Yepremian, the left - footed soccer - type Cypriot kicker, booted two field goals as the Lions upset Baltimore 20-14 last Sunday.

Buffalo, leading the AFL's Eastern Division by a full game, can put more distance between itself and pursuing Boston and New York.

But the Bills will have a battle on their hands against the Raiders, who've won six of their last seven and jumped into second place in the Western Division.

The other pro teams play Sunday. In the National League, Atlanta is at Chicago, Green Bay visits Minnesota, Los Angeles takes on Baltimore, New York is at Washington and Pittsburgh takes on St. Louis.

In the American League, New York entertains Kansas City, San Diego is at Denver and Boston plays at Miami.

Novelist Fannie Hurst tells this story on herself. While dining out one night, she ran into a friend whom she hadn't seen for some time -- not since she'd embarked on a rigid slimming program. He didn't recognize her at all. "Don't you remember me?" she asked. "It's the same old Fannie Hurst you knew years ago."

"No," he said. "It might be the same old Hurst, but it sure isn't the same old fanny."

Scott City Has Trouble With Woodland

LUTESVILLE - Scott City's Rams overcame a 40-37 half deficit last night and kept their unbeaten record intact by pulling out an 84-76 basketball victory over the host Woodland Cardinals.

The winners were paced by Crabtree, Sanford and Paine, who drilled 26, 22 and 21 points respectively, as the Rams surged in front in the third quarter and held on for their third victory of the young season.

Game scoring honors, went to Crader, who poured in 41 points for Woodland. Hahn added 25 more to the Cardinal attack.

Scott City also chalked up a 62-44 win in the preliminary B game to complete a two-game sweep behind a 20-point effort by Gibson. Keith topped the losers with 11.

New Coach, New Basketball Outlook For Sikeston High

This year will mark a beginning for Sikeston high school basketball.

Coach N. P. MacDaniel, who is not new to the coaching business, will take over head coaching duties for the first year as coach of the Bulldogs. MacDaniel has coached in many cities of Missouri and has produced many fine teams.

Prior to the last three years, when he was head coach at West Plains, he coached at Thayer.

At Thayer he produced a State runner-up team, and a state quarter-finalist team at Winona. He also produced fine teams at Matthews.

The Bulldog basketball squad is showing spirit and enthusiasm, the sign of a hard fighting team.

This year's team lacks experience as there are few returning lettermen from the past year's squad. It appears as though this will be a rebuilding year, many young players are likely to see action and a number of promising sophomores are expected to be pushing for starting positions on the "A" team. This is unusual around Sikeston as the "A" team is usually made up of juniors and seniors, but there has not been a large turnout of boys in these grades.

Coach MacDaniel plans to overcome the lack of experience by squad depth. Speedy guards and real tough rebounding will be two of the strong points of the Bulldogs.

Fans will have their first opportunity to see the Bulldogs in action during the Southeast Missouri basketball conference tournament, which will be held in Jackson Nov. 28-Dec. 3. Sikeston plays Jackson, which is seeded fourth Monday at 8:30 p.m. following the Cape Central-Poplar Bluff game, which will begin at 7 p.m.

Army Given Edge Over Navy In Annual Clash

By HAROLD CLAASSEN

NEW YORK (AP) — Army will beat Navy, Alabama will polish off both Southern Mississippi and Auburn and Notre Dame will recover from its bruising battle with Michigan State in time to defeat Southern Californ.

Those are the final forecasts of the season.

Army over Navy: This game always is the last half of the two-part football schedules at the two service academies. All the preceding games are merely practice sessions in preparation for this one.

Army has the better record, 7-2, to Navy's 4-5. The Middies, however, did better against Notre Dame than did the Cadets. Army, in turn, did better against Pittsburgh than did Navy.

Georgia over Georgia Tech: A neighborhood feud with national implications. Georgia was beaten once, by a single point; Georgia Tech, unbeaten until now, will have a similar record by nightfall Saturday.

Florida over Miami: Steve Spurrier, the Heisman Trophy winner, will pierce the Hurricanes' outstanding defense in his final scheduled appearance as a Gator. It is a Saturday afternoon affair.

Texas over Texas A&M: It has been a sad year for both, but the Aggies will be even sadder as they devour their turkey Thursday.

Nebraska over Oklahoma: The Huskers already have won their fourth straight Big Eight crown, and they have the talent to scalp the Sooners and finish the year unbeaten. It, too, is a Thursday game.

Alabama over Southern Mississippi: Southern Mississippi lost to Mississippi State, Alabama beat the same team by 13 points.

Notre Dame over Southern California: After their games of a week ago — Notre Dame against Michigan State and Southern California against UCLA — how can either field a team this week. But the Notre Damers are younger and will recuperate faster. It is a Saturday affair.

Mizzou Has Six Lettermen Returning

COLUMBIA - A big ball-club that can still exploit the run - and - shoot game is Coach Bob Vanatta's goal in the 1966-67 basketball season.

In his fifth year at Mizzou, Vanatta expects to have his deepest and tallest squad. Six lettermen -- four of them starters -- return from the Big Eight's tail - end team last year, but the Tiger coach is counting heavily on new faces to boost Missouri's basketball stock.

"We have size and pretty good agility," Vanatta noted. "We're trying to emphasize quickness. Our rebounding ought to be considerably better. To be a running team, three of your five players are the real keys."

On the heels of a disastrous 3-21 season, worst in the school's history, Mizzou has acquired four, rangy junior college transfers and two other tall sophomores.

How will these newcomers -- three of them from Moberly's national junior college titlists -- blend with M. U.'s six holdovers, headed by Ron Coleman, a 21.3 - point shooter last year?

Lean Gene Jones, 6-7 forward from Paducah, Ky., looks like the earliest bet to cinch a regular job -- after his 20-point explosion in the Tigers' first intra - squad game. Other juco candidates are ex-Greyhounds Jim Chapman (6-6), Larry Pierick (6-7), and Tom Johnson (6-4).

Mizzou's first seven - footer, Booker Brown from Kansas City's Central high, and 6-6 John Weston of Springfield are the two rookies with the best credentials off the freshman squad. Still another prospect is Tom Miltenberger, 6-5 junior from Warrenton, who sat out last season with a fractured ankle.

All of these giraffian types, plus lettermen Rich Milling (6-8) and Gary Frazier (6-5), guarantee that competition for the three front-court positions will be extra - keen.

In the backcourt, Coleman and Rob Vanatta -- senior co-captains -- are the guard tandem, backstopped by veterans Gene Pinkney and Bob Dinsdale and Dave Bennett, a scholastic casualty at mid - semester last ter. Best of the freshman ackliners was John Duft, a 6-2 player from Highland, Ill.

The Tigers open up aganst Arkansas here on Dec. 3. Their December travels will include appearances in Madison Square Garden (against Rutgers) and a three - game tour of the West Coast (Seattle, Santa Clara and the University of Pacific.)

Central Falls To Notre Dame

CAPE GIRARDEAU -- Scott County Central opened the evening last night with a 49-39 win over the host Notre Dame Bulldog B squad but dropped the A contest, 69-64.

Notre Dame jumped into an early lead and had little trouble controling the Braves. The Bulldogs held leads of 15-14, 37-28, 56-41 before the final quarter.

High scoring Greg Flaker was held to 18 points but teammates Halter, Ziegler and Bucek took up the slack and scored 20, 16, and 11 points respectively.

Miles and Lee netted 18 and 16 points respectively in leading the Braves in the scoring column.

Karnes netted 17 points in leading Scott County Central to its "B" game victory. Maurer collected 11 points to take high scoring honors for Notre Dame.

What's different about Dark Bourbon?

It looks darker.
The flavor's richer.
The flavor's smoother.
The flavor's deeper.

Let's get something straight. Dark Bourbon is not for everybody. But a lot of people have asked us if we couldn't make a really BOURBONY-Bourbon... with a flavor that goes deeper. To make it, we developed a unique new recipe based on a hand-made sour mash method. A method perfected by over four generations of know-how. The result—a Bourbon virile and robust, a shade darker in color, but incredibly smooth and mellow. Not for every taste, we repeat—but for those who want all the flavor, try Hill & Hill Preferred, ninety-proof, the dark one!

Nebraska over Oklahoma: The Huskers already have won their fourth straight Big Eight crown, and they have the talent to scalp the Sooners and finish the year unbeaten. It, too, is a Thursday game.

Alabama over Southern Mississippi: Southern Mississippi lost to Mississippi State, Alabama beat the same team by 13 points.

Notre Dame over Southern California: After their games of a week ago — Notre Dame against Michigan State and Southern California against UCLA — how can either field a team this week. But the Notre Damers are younger and will recuperate faster. It is a Saturday affair.

Mizzou Has Six Lettermen Returning

COLUMBIA - A big ball-club that can still exploit the run - and - shoot game is Coach Bob Vanatta's goal in the 1966-67 basketball season.

In his fifth year at Mizzou, Vanatta expects to have his deepest and tallest squad. Six lettermen -- four of them starters -- return from the Big Eight's tail - end team last year, but the Tiger coach is counting heavily on new faces to boost Missouri's basketball stock.

"We have size and pretty good agility," Vanatta noted. "We're trying to emphasize quickness. Our rebounding ought to be considerably better. To be a running team, three of your five players are the real keys."

On the heels of a disastrous 3-21 season, worst in the school's history, Mizzou has acquired four, rangy junior college transfers and two other tall sophomores.

How will these newcomers -- three of them from Moberly's national junior college titlists -- blend with M. U.'s six holdovers, headed by Ron Coleman, a 21.3 - point shooter last year?

Lean Gene Jones, 6-7 forward from Paducah, Ky., looks like the earliest bet to cinch a regular job -- after his 20-point explosion in the Tigers' first intra - squad game. Other juco candidates are ex-Greyhounds Jim Chapman (6-6), Larry Pierick (6-7), and Tom Johnson (6-4).

Mizzou's first seven -footer, Booker Brown from Kansas City's Central high, and 6-6 John Weston of Springfield are the two rookies with the best credentials off the freshman squad. Still another prospect is Tom Miltenberger, 6-5 junior from Warrenton, who sat out last season with a fractured ankle.

All of these giraffian types, plus lettermen Rich Milling (6-8) and Gary Frazier (6-5), guarantee that competition for the three front-court positions will be extra - keen.

In the backcourt, Coleman and Rob Vanatta -- senior co-captains -- are the guard tandem, backstopped by veterans Gene Pinkney and Bob Dinsdale and Dave Bennett, a scholastic casualty at mid - semester last ter. Best of the freshman ackliners was John Duft, a 6-2 player from Highland, Ill.

The Tigers open up aganst Arkansas here on Dec. 3. Their December travels will include appearances in Madison Square Garden (against Rutgers) and a three - game tour of the West Coast (Seattle, Santa Clara and the University of Pacific.)

Central Falls To Notre Dame

CAPE GIRARDEAU -- Scott County Central opened the evening last night with a 49-39 win over the host Notre Dame Bulldog B squad but dropped the A contest, 69-64.

Notre Dame jumped into an early lead and had little trouble controling the Braves. The Bulldogs held leads of 15-14, 37-28, 56-41 before the final quarter.

High scoring Greg Flaker was held to 18 points but teammates Halter, Ziegler and Bucek took up the slack and scored 20, 16, and 11 points respectively.

Miles and Lee netted 18 and 16 points respectively in leading the Braves in the scoring column.

Karnes netted 17 points in leading Scott County Central to its "B" game victory. Maurer collected 11 points to take high scoring honors for Notre Dame.

There were two things my high school English teacher deeply loved: her teaching and her aging mother. When her mother died, I sent her a letter of condolence. The next time we met she thanked me. Then she added, "I want you to know I received letters from many ex-pupils, including some who have been through graduate school and are now successful in their professions. But none equaled yours in content and syntax."

What's different about Dark Bourbon?

It looks darker.
The flavor's richer.
The flavor's smoother.
The flavor's deeper.

Let's get something straight. Dark Bourbon is not for everybody. But a lot of people have asked us if we couldn't make a really BOURBONY-Bourbon... with a flavor that goes deeper. To make it, we developed a unique new recipe based on a hand-made sour mash method. A method perfected by over four generations of know-how. The result—a Bourbon virile and robust, a shade darker in color, but incredibly smooth and mellow. Not for every taste, we repeat—but for those who want all the flavor, try Hill & Hill Preferred, ninety-proof, the dark one!

Drew Pearson Special

DREW PEARSON SAYS: George Washington's Thanksgiving proposal got loud veto from Democrats; U. S. can't ignore China -- our no. 1 problem; Russia wants divorce from Chinese Communism.

WASHINGTON - When George Washington first asked congress in 1789 to set aside a national Thanksgiving Day to be observed by the entire country there was vigorous objection that he was trampling on states' rights.

The objection came from the Reaganites and the Liberty Lobbyites of those early days, only they happened to be Democrats. It was the Republicans who then wanted a centralized government in Washington.

So, because of Democratic opposition, Thanksgiving did not become a national holiday until three - quarters of a century later; and it was the grocers and wine merchants who were then largely responsible. It was in 1845 that Washington wine merchants, awakening to the possibilities advertising "sixty barrels of White Wine, forty barrels of champagne and New York Cider, all by recent packet from New York via Alexandria."

That was 121 years ago, and at that time the United States was a very slow - moving, simply - living nation. The President at that time would never have thought of going to Texas for a few days off, first because Texas didn't enter the union until a month later; second, it would have taken him several weeks by boat around the coast of the United States to get there.

Seldom did the President at that time drive farther from Washington than the neighboring Maryland countryside, and the chief problems facing him were the expanding west and when and where to limit slavery.

OUR NO. 1 PROBLEM

Today, 121 years later, I submit that the chief problem facing the United States is one which most Americans don't worry much about, the chaotic restlessness of a country halfway around the world -- Communist China. This is a nation so complex, so complicated, and so potentially dangerous that we simply shove it into the background. Yet it cannot be shoved under the rug in the manner our state department wishes.

The chief reason China is so dangerous is that it is governed by leaders who have indicated publicly that they would not be averse to losing some of their vast 700,000,000 manpower in an atomic war; and because these leaders have now developed nuclear weapons, plus limited missiles with which to deliver them.

This Thanksgiving week, intelligence reports reaching Washington state that China's leaders, in order to divert attention from their own internal difficulties may send troops into North Viet Nam.

China's frontier with North Viet Nam is wide open. The main road and railroads are manned by 40,000 Chinese volunteers. A Chinese army could move down these routes with ease. If so, U. S. forces in South Viet Nam would probably suffer the same problems Gen. Douglas MacArthur did in Korea.

The chief reason China is complicated is that we have kept her isolated. During the McCarthy witch - hunting days, four State Department officials were fired because they proposed a policy of trying to get along with China; and so many others were intimidated that no one around the State Department has dared advocate ending the U. S. boycott of China.

VORTEX OF CHANGE

Meanwhile a ferment has been taking place inside China. The top professors and Presidents of Chinese Universities have been fired and given menial coolie jobs. Their sin was to advocate "Revisionism," a change in the Marxist-Lenin doctrine of the inevitability of a clash between Communism and Capitalism.

The aging Mao - Tse-Tung, alarmed over the challenge to his power, originally organized the Red Guard -- several million youngsters who have flocked to Peking, swamping the railroads and tying up Peking traffic with such long parades that Mao has finally got tired of shivering in the reviewing stand as they marched past. When he ducked out, however, the Red Guards came to a halt in front of the stand until he returned.

Finally Mao has forbidden any more of the 9,000,000 Red Guards to come to Peking and ordered all others to go home.

These are some of the factors which caused the Russians to demand a world Communist conference with a view to reading China out of the Community party. They consider the Chines too unpredictable, to complicated and too dangerous. In contrast, Russian Communism in the 49 years since the Bolshevik revolution has settled down to a fairly methodical bureaucracy. The Russians want to keep it that way.

This vortex of change in the Communist world is probably the most important single world development in the past ten years, and is one reason Ambassador Arthur Goldberg privately disagrees with his colleagues in the State Department that China cannot be isolated and must be taken into the U.N.

Ambassador Goldberg is a loyal member of the Johnson team and is carrying out State Department orders in New York. Inside the State department, however, he has argued that it's time for a new American approach to China and the United Nations, that it's easier to deal with China within the family of nations rather than as a belligerent outsider and that the United States should adopt a two - China policy of admitting both Formosa and Peking to the U.N.

There was a time, of course, when it took several weeks for Chinese junks to reach the western world; when Japan could and did remain completely isolated, when wine for Thanksgiving in the nation's capital arrived by packet boat from New York, and when the President of the United States seldom traveled farther away from the capital than by horse and carriage in nearby Maryland.

But today China has its own nuclear weapons plus missiles of limited range, and it will only be a short time before she perfects them and their means of delivery.

HORSES, COWBOYS AND 'CHOPPERS' FEATURED TOYS FOR CHRISTMAS

Sound and action -- the very essence of little boys and girls -- dominate the line of toys stocked in retail stores for Christmas.

Space-age themes involving moon rockets, space stations and space ships seem to have given way this year to the aviation and Western variety of toys, according to W. S. Hicks, a buyer for F.W. Woolworth Co. But for little girls dolls are most popular.

With helicopters coming of age as airport "taxis" and industrial "trucks," a new realistic toy helicopter will be popular this year. It has blinking lights, produces the sound of whirling helicopter blades, and can move forward or in circles.

Western themes include a wide variety of "heroes of the West," plastic models complete with model horses. Accessories available include cowboy hats, vests, guns, cooking equipment, saddles and bridles.

New this year are musical trains moving on a circular track which serves as a xylophone, Mr. Hicks reports. The cross-ties sound musical notes and can be rearranged so the moving train plays various tunes.

The newest thing in metal toys is a carrousel truck with action and musical sound. In the musical toy line there are plastic guitars, snare drum sets, trap drums and cymbals.

But the Woolworth toy buyer beams over a cheerful, tearful doll that cries real tears, drinks water and can change expression from crying, to pouting, to smiling, when her arms are moved.

A new baby doll on a pillow, dressed in Christmas colors, is very attractive. Also you can find some of the world's tiniest and cutest fully-costumed doll people -- 12 different tinies about four inches tall.

There are some "good luck" dolls too, but they are probably of more interest to older girls. They are vinyl weirdies known as wishniks, with high-banked green, black, yellow or blue hair that you can rub just for good luck.

MOTORISTS WARNED AGAINST DRIVING ON CLOSED ROADS

The Missouri State Highway Commission has issued a warning to motorists not to drive on highways which are closed for construction or on new routes not yet open to traffic.

At the same time, the Commission announced a stepped up program of enforcement against violators.

The action is being taken, the Commission said, because of a growing number of accidents, injuries and fatalities which have occurred recently on closed sections of highways. Some drivers have been getting on the closed routes by driving around barricades.

Col. E. L. (Mike) Hockaday, superintendent of the State Highway Patrol, told the Commission the Patrol would cooperate fully in attempting to halt the violations.

Violators are subject to arrest and penalty under criminal tresspass laws, according to Robert L. Hyder, Chief Counsel of the Commission.

The Commission authorized Chief Engineer M. J. Snider and each of the ten district engineers throughout the state to issue directives declaring roads under construction as officially closed. In addition to barricades placed on the highways by contractors, Commission personnel will post large signs informing motorists that the routes are closed to traffic.

The Commission quoted the following state law, 227.250 RS Mo., which authorizes it to take action:

"The Commission shall have power to close temporarily for the purpose of construction or repair any portion of a state highway to public use and to issue regulations controlling the use of state highways and all properties relating thereto."

Man to Enter Priesthood at Age of Sixty

AKRON, Ohio (AP) -- On Thanksgiving Day, George N. Smith is to be ordained a priest, fulfilling at the age of 60 the desire he held for 42 years.

He will return Dec. 8 to his native Akron to offer Mass in his home parish, St. Vincent. After a visit here, he will return to Puerto Rico to serve as chaplain to American tourists in Dorado Beach, and development director of the Arecido Diocese.

Congratulations have come from Pope Paul VI, President Johnson and others.

Father Smith dreamed of being a priest while a student at St. Vincent High School here. He was graduated from Sacred Heart Academy, then took charge of student recruitment for St. Joseph College near Rensselaer, Ind.

He studied at St. Mary Seminary in Cleveland, Ohio, St. Thomas Seminary in Denver, Colo.; and Holy Cross Abbey in Canon City, Colo. But he never made it to ordination.

A major reason was his widowed mother, who lived alone in Akron. He returned to be with her. A week after his mother died in August 1965, he entered Holy Apostles Seminary in Washington, D. C.

This time he made it to ordination and was "adopted" by the Arecibo Diocese.

Long Seeks Additional Funds for Memorial

WASHINGTON (AP) -- Sen. Edward V. Long, D-Mo., urged the director of the Bureau of the Budget Tuesday to include at least $2,325,000 in the 1967 supplemental budget for completion of the visitors center and museum of the Jefferson National Expansion Memorial in St. Louis.

"Last year, the Congress authorized a final increment of $6 million to complete the project, but as you know, none of this amount has been budgeted or appropriated," Long wrote Charles L. Schultze.

"The current work on the memorial will come to a halt early next year unless additional funds are appropriated."

Long said the federal share for the work on the Visitors Center and Museum of Westward Expansion will be $2,325,000 and that "the local contribution of $775,000 has been tendered if the federal appropriation is forthcoming."

AT GREAT LAKES Naval Training Station, in World War II, a lad was trying for his second-class rating as a ship's cook. He had passed his written exam and was up for an oral. "Jim," the captain asked, "how do you prepare broccoli?"

"Well, sir, you can steam it, boil it or cream it--but they ain't going to eat it nohow." He got his rate.

Airline Subsidy Needs Decline

WASHINGTON (AP) -- The Civil Aeronautics Board estimated today the smaller airlines will need about $68 million in federal subsidy in the current fiscal year.

This is about $6 million less than in the fiscal year that ended last June 30, $11.4 million less than in the year ended June 30, 1965, and $15 million less than the $83 million peak subsidy payment for the fiscal year ended in June, 1964.

About 85 per cent of the subsidy goes to the 13 local service airlines.

Payments are lower this year for:

Frontier, Denver, $5,522,000, down $614,000; Ozark, St. Louis, $4,963,000, down $363,000.

Shoe Contract Awarded

WASHINGTON (AP) -- The Defense Supply Agency has awarded a $1.2 million contract to the International Shoe Co., St. Louis, Mo., for $48,944 pairs of men's black oxford dress shoes.

The work will be done at the company's plant in Hermann, Mo., the agency informed Sens. Stuart Symington and Edward V. Long and Rep. William L. Hungate, Missouri Democrats.

"Food will play an increasingly significant role in the free world's quest for peace. In that quest, feeding mankind becomes a primary consideration as the population explosion threatens starvation for many more millions in an already hungry world. The overwhelming need if for high protein foods at low cost. We are exploring the appropriate role for General Foods in helping meet this need.

Long Seeks Additional Funds for Memorial

WASHINGTON (AP) -- Sen. Edward V. Long, D-Mo., urged the director of the Bureau of the Budget Tuesday to include at least $2,325,000 in the 1967 supplemental budget for completion of the visitors center and museum of the Jefferson National Expansion Memorial in St. Louis.

"Last year, the Congress authorized a final increment of $6 million to complete the project, but as you know, none of this amount has been budgeted or appropriated," Long wrote Charles L. Schultze.

"The current work on the memorial will come to a halt early next year unless additional funds are appropriated."

Long said the federal share for the work on the Visitors Center and Museum of Westward Expansion will be $2,325,000 and that "the local contribution of $775,000 has been tendered if the federal appropriation is forthcoming."

AT GREAT LAKES Naval Training Station, in World War II, a lad was trying for his second-class rating as a ship's cook. He had passed his written exam and was up for an oral. "Jim," the captain asked, "how do you prepare broccoli?"

"Well, sir, you can steam it, boil it or cream it--but they ain't going to eat it nohow." He got his rate.

Airline Subsidy Needs Decline

WASHINGTON (AP) -- The Civil Aeronautics Board estimated today the smaller airlines will need about $68 million in federal subsidy in the current fiscal year.

This is about $6 million less than in the fiscal year that ended last June 30, $11.4 million less than in the year ended June 30, 1965, and $15 million less than the $83 million peak subsidy payment for the fiscal year ended in June, 1964.

About 85 per cent of the subsidy goes to the 13 local service airlines.

Payments are lower this year for:

Frontier, Denver, $5,522,000, down $614,000; Ozark, St. Louis, $4,963,000, down $363,000.

Shoe Contract Awarded

WASHINGTON (AP) -- The Defense Supply Agency has awarded a $1.2 million contract to the International Shoe Co., St. Louis, Mo., for $48,944 pairs of men's black oxford dress shoes.

The work will be done at the company's plant in Hermann, Mo., the agency informed Sens. Stuart Symington and Edward V. Long and Rep. William L. Hungate, Missouri Democrats.

"Food will play an increasingly significant role in the free world's quest for peace. In that quest, feeding mankind becomes a primary consideration as the population explosion threatens starvation for many more millions in an already hungry world. The overwhelming need if for high protein foods at low cost. We are exploring the appropriate role for General Foods in helping meet this need.

4-H'ers Honored At Banquet

BENTON -- Sixty-two Scott County 4-H Club leaders were honored at the annual 4-H club leaders recognition banquet last Wednesday night. The address was delivered by Rush Limbough Jr., of Cape Girardeau, who spoke on "Our Heritage."

He told of courage and dedication of the 56 signers of the U.S. Constitution when they risked the loss of all of their wordly possessions when they signed that document. Many of them lost all they had, including their lives, for the principle of freedom.

Eighteen leaders received one year awards, eight two year awards, six three year awards, five four years, eight five years, three six years, three seven years, two eight years, one nine years, six ten years, one nineteen-years, and one twenty years.

Mrs. Lillie Tate of Morley received a 20-year diamond pin while Mrs. Leon Dannenmeuller received an award for 19 years of leadership. Those receiving 10 year awards were: Andrew Kieffer, Henry Perr, E. G. Smith, Mrs. Lyman Bollinger, Mrs. Andrew Kieffer and Mrs. Ervin LeGrand.

The LeGrand family received an award for promoting international understanding and world peace. They were the host family for international farm youth exchange, Miss Patricia Hamnett, from the United Kingdom, spent two weeks in the LeGrand home the past summer.

Others appearing on the program were Miss Charlotte Bollinger, mistress of ceremonies; Barbara and Joe Stricker, special music; Miss Marquita Byrd, invocation introductions, Tom Stroup, county extension director, and Henry Perr, 4-H leader from Scott City.

Awards and dinner were sponsored by the Scott County Farm Bureau and the Banks of Scott county. More than 85 attended.

On last Thursday afternoon, Mrs. Lyman Dame entertained for her daughter, Judith Ann, who that day celebrated her fifth birth anniversary at the family home on Matthews street. The guest were: Wayne McCrory, Sue Arbaugh, Patsy Bennett, Janet Couch, Peggy Ann Alcorn, Elwood Reece Kinder, Sonny Cope, Kora Kay Wake, Jimmie Fennell, Dona Kay Cline, Owen Duke and Sarah Margaret Mills.

J. Val Baker, former prosecuting attorney of New Madrid County, who would have been 81 years old on December 4, died at his home in Morehouse early Friday morning after an illness of about six years.

Sikeston is to have a headquarters company of the 140 Infantry of National Guard, according to an announcement made this week, with Lewis Conley having been named as commanding officer of the company. It was also announced that the First Battalion Headquarters would be located in Sikeston with Major Herb Wickham of Cape Girardeau as battalion commander. The State Guard Company D of Sikeston is to be inactivated on November 30 and the National Guard Battalion is to be given federal recognition on December 1.

Work of installation of 210 parking meters in the Sikeston business district got under way this week. Sikeston is the first city in Southeast Missouri to install parking meters and will be the "guinea pig" for the whole territory to see whether they are a success from a financial standpoint, both to the city and to merchants.

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a married woman with a most unusual problem. My parents (or the people I had always thought were my parents) died last year within months of each other. Yesterday the woman I thought was my aunt told me she is my real mother.

My "aunt" confessed she couldn't raise me because her sweetheart (my father) left town when he learned of her condition. She was kept out of sight in her married sister's house for several months. Relatives and friends were told she had left the country.

In the meantime the married sister kept plumping herself up with pillows, pretending to be pregnant. I was born at home and the attending midwife was sworn to secrecy. According to my "aunt" the hoax worked beautifully, and nobody suspected a thing.

The strange revelation has me in a state of shock. I don't doubt that it is true because all my life people have told me I am a carbon copy of my "aunt." I don't resemble either of my "parents" in the slightest.

Should I tell my husband and his mother about this? I have no proof, but I'm almost certain the story is true. --- STRANGER THAN FICTION

Dear Stranger: Nothing is to be gained by repeating this bizarre story which could be a figment of auntie's imagination. If you want to tell the story to your husband, go ahead, but don't give it any wider distribution.

Dear Ann Landers: I lost my husband a few years ago and recently married a fine man who has many wonderful qualities.

He bought us a beautiful home and from all outward appearances we should be very happy. The problem is with my children. My husband is a strict disciplinarian, which I think is fine, but he makes a big fuss over things which I feel are unimportant.

For instance, he does not believe in using sugar, white bread, catsup, or salt and pepper. He doesn't touch mashed potatoes, hot dogs, or hamburgers. My children are forever getting lectures on eating "what is good for them." Meal time is becoming a nightmare.

I hope this does not sound like a lot of nonsence, Ann, because it is a problem that is actually pulling our marriage apart. My husband admits he is too much of a perfectionist and he has demostrated his willingness to talk things over with me. Please tell me how to deal with the problem. ---TORN

Dear Torn: Surely you knew how your husband felt about sugar, catsup, salt and pepper before you married him. That was the time to decide whether they would be served to other members of the family. Since these foods are not harmful your husband should not inflict his hang-ups on others.

On the other hand, you should allow him to discipline the children without interference. I suspect you have been somewhat permissive and the change could be very good for them, provided, of course, he doesn't go overboard. This is where you should be the balance wheel.

Confidential to Goofed Again: The only person who has never made a mistake is the person who has never done anything. Don't be ashamed to admit it when you know you are wrong. You lose nothing. It simply proves you are smarter today than you were yesterday.

No teen-ager is as confident as he appears. Get clued in. Send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Dating Do's and Don'ts," enclosing with your request 35¢ in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

To the Editor
DAILY SIKESTON STANDARD
Sikeston, Missouri

The fair sex, "Regal Queen Customer" could always be right. Careful statisticians say she owns 60 per cent of the wealth and bewitched optimistic estimators figure as high as 80 per cent. She is distressed that our soldiers are under communist gunfire and subjected to other atrocities. She does not want to soothe the socialist or caress the communist and could dictate the policies of TV news and entertainment. She is not aware the enemy writes the stations and her friends do not. None of the CBS, 208 stations; NBC, 202; ABC 137; NET, 117 or the Overmeyer group of about 65 stations, have a monopoly beyond her influence. "Queen" customer directs the spending of much wealth she does not possess. Stations and advertisers may think their entertainment and news must be slanted "slightly to the left," but the "Queen" likes the ones who "slant the least" or even favor freedom.

Constructively,
H. L. Hunt

To the Editor:

It seems there was a patriot who decided to fly his American flag each and every day. He was insulted and harassed. His property was spattered with garbage. Finally, his flag was torn down and trampled into the dirt.

This outrage did not occur during the Revolutionary War nor during the Civil War between the states. It did not even take place in an unfriendly foreign country.

This episode took place in Rockford, Ill., in just the past few weeks. Mr. Lou Caccio started flying his flag when the "cream of America's youth" started burning their draft cards. This was the answer he received from the citizens of Rockford.

I cannot find the words to describe the shock, shame, and anger I experienced when I read of this incident. Perhaps the part that shocked me most was the fact that the news article concerning this outrage did not receive two - inch headlines. It did not even make the front page.

I must confess that I have been lax in my patriotic endeavor. From now on I am going to fly our flag. Every day that I am here to fly it, it is going to fly.

Prayer
From The Upper Room

"If the Son makes you free, you will be free indeed." (John 8:36, RSV)

PRAYER: Our Father, we thank Thee for Thy blessings which are beyond counting. We thank Thee above all for the gift of Thy Son, Jesus Christ, and for the deliverance and freedom we find in Him. In His name we give Thee grateful praise. Amen.

Armed Forces

VICTORVILLE, Calif.-- U.S. Air Force Major Wilbur R. Dudley, whose parents are Mr. and Mrs. G. A. McGuire of 909 Texas, Orange, Tex., has been decorated with the Silver Star - one of this nation's highest decorations for heroism -- at George AFB, Calif.

Major Dudley, an F-4C Phantom II pilot, was cited for his outstanding courage and professional skill in destroying one MIG fighter and routing several others while escorting a tactical bomber in operaforce.

A graduate of Lutcher Stark High School, the major attended Northern Oklahoma Junior College in Tonkawa, and New Mexico State University in Alamogordo.

The Korean War veteran received his commission through the aviation cadet program.

Sikeston is to have a headquarters company of the 140 Infantry of National Guard, according to an announcement made this week, with Lewis Conley having been named as commanding officer of the company. It was also announced that the First Battalion Headquarters would be located in Sikeston with Major Herb Wickham of Cape Girardeau as battalion commander. The State Guard Company D of Sikeston is to be inactivated on November 30 and the National Guard Battalion is to be given federal recognition on December 1.

Work of installation of 210 parking meters in the Sikeston business district got under way this week. Sikeston is the first city in Southeast Missouri to install parking meters and will be the "guinea pig" for the whole territory to see whether they are a success from a financial standpoint, both to the city and to merchants.

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a married woman with a most unusual problem. My parents (or the people I had always thought were my parents) died last year within months of each other. Yesterday the woman I thought was my aunt told me she is my real mother.

My "aunt" confessed she couldn't raise me because her sweetheart (my father) left town when he learned of her condition. She was kept out of sight in her married sister's house for several months. Relatives and friends were told she had left the country.

In the meantime the married sister kept plumping herself up with pillows, pretending to be pregnant. I was born at home and the attending midwife was sworn to secrecy. According to my "aunt" the hoax worked beautifully, and nobody suspected a thing.

The strange revelation has me in a state of shock. I don't doubt that it is true because all my life people have told me I am a carbon copy of my "aunt." I don't resemble either of my "parents" in the slightest.

Should I tell my husband and his mother about this? I have no proof, but I'm almost certain the story is true. --- STRANGER THAN FICTION

Dear Stranger: Nothing is to be gained by repeating this bizarre story which could be a figment of auntie's imagination. If you want to tell the story to your husband, go ahead, but don't give it any wider distribution.

Dear Ann Landers: I lost my husband a few years ago and recently married a fine man who has many wonderful qualities.

He bought us a beautiful home and from all outward appearances we should be very happy. The problem is with my children. My husband is a strict disciplinarian, which I think is fine, but he makes a big fuss over things which I feel are unimportant.

For instance, he does not believe in using sugar, white bread, catsup, or salt and pepper. He doesn't touch mashed potatoes, hot dogs, or hamburgers. My children are forever getting lectures on eating "what is good for them." Meal time is becoming a nightmare.

I hope this does not sound like a lot of nonsence, Ann, because it is a problem that is actually pulling our marriage apart. My husband admits he is too much of a perfectionist and he has demostrated his willingness to talk things over with me. Please tell me how to deal with the problem. ---TORN

Dear Torn: Surely you knew how your husband felt about sugar, catsup, salt and pepper before you married him. That was the time to decide whether they would be served to other members of the family. Since these foods are not harmful your husband should not inflict his hang-ups on others.

On the other hand, you should allow him to discipline the children without interference. I suspect you have been somewhat permissive and the change could be very good for them, provided, of course, he doesn't go overboard. This is where you should be the balance wheel.

Confidential to Goofed Again: The only person who has never made a mistake is the person who has never done anything. Don't be ashamed to admit it when you know you are wrong. You lose nothing. It simply proves you are smarter today than you were yesterday.

No teen-ager is as confident as he appears. Get clued in. Send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Dating Do's and Don'ts," enclosing with your request 35¢ in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

To the Editor
DAILY SIKESTON STANDARD
Sikeston, Missouri

The fair sex, "Regal Queen Customer" could always be right. Careful statisticians say she owns 60 per cent of the wealth and bewitched optimistic estimators figure as high as 80 per cent. She is distressed that our soldiers are under communist gunfire and subjected to other atrocities. She does not want to soothe the socialist or caress the communist and could dictate the policies of TV news and entertainment. She is not aware the enemy writes the stations and her friends do not. None of the CBS, 208 stations; NBC, 202; ABC 137; NET, 117 or the Overmeyer group of about 65 stations, have a monopoly beyond her influence. "Queen" customer directs the spending of much wealth she does not possess. Stations and advertisers may think their entertainment and news must be slanted "slightly to the left," but the "Queen" likes the ones who "slant the least" or even favor freedom.

Constructively,
H. L. Hunt

To the Editor:

It seems there was a patriot who decided to fly his American flag each and every day. He was insulted and harassed. His property was spattered with garbage. Finally, his flag was torn down and trampled into the dirt.

This outrage did not occur during the Revolutionary War nor during the Civil War between the states. It did not even take place in an unfriendly foreign country.

This episode took place in Rockford, Ill., in just the past few weeks. Mr. Lou Caccio started flying his flag when the "cream of America's youth" started burning their draft cards. This was the answer he received from the citizens of Rockford.

I cannot find the words to describe the shock, shame, and anger I experienced when I read of this incident. Perhaps the part that shocked me most was the fact that the news article concerning this outrage did not receive two - inch headlines. It did not even make the front page.

I must confess that I have been lax in my patriotic endeavor. From now on I am going to fly our flag. Every day that I am here to fly it, it is going to fly.

Prayer
From The Upper Room

"If the Son makes you free, you will be free indeed." (John 8:36, RSV)

PRAYER: Our Father, we thank Thee for Thy blessings which are beyond counting. We thank Thee above all for the gift of Thy Son, Jesus Christ, and for the deliverance and freedom we find in Him. In His name we give Thee grateful praise. Amen.

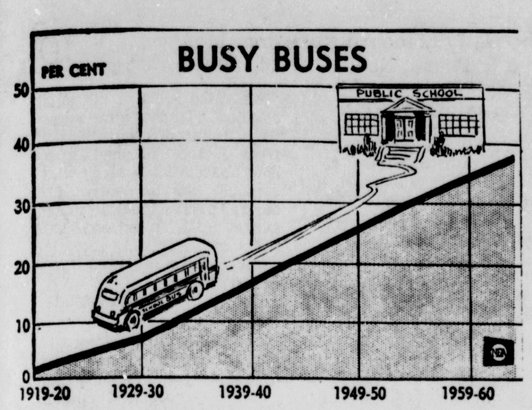
UNITED

SIKESTON UNITED FUND FOR 1966



The number of students wheeling it to school at public expense is steadily rising. Back in 1919-20, school buses served only 1.6 per cent of public school students. The rest had to beat the bell on their own. By 1963-64, the percentage riding buses had risen to 38.7—15,560,000 out of the 40,187,000 public school students enrolled throughout the nation that year.

CARDS OF THANKS 25

In loving memory of Russell E. Long, who was killed in a car accident Nov. 21, 1963.

As we look out beyond tomorrow
See the future so dark and gloom
We wonder if up in Heaven,
You know will be there soon
You left us so quick, and suddenly
No time for a tender kiss
Not even a tear or sigh
No time for a hurried goodbye
Yet you'd have wanted it that way
Had you known, you to would have feared
But God took your hand so gently
And whispered, "it was for you I cared."
You accidently went and left us
In Heaven, you'll find sweet rest
Up there with the Heavenly Savior
You'll live in the riches bliss
No troubles or trials to confront you
No nothing but the Great Love of God.
We know you're Happy our darling
While yet on the earth we must tred.
No matter what we see in the future
Heaven is our eternal goal
Will be at home forever
On the beautiful home of the soul.
Sadly missed by your family
Mrs. Delores Long, Evelyn, Linda, Jim and Vest Long.

The number of students wheeling it to school at public expense is steadily rising. Back in 1919-20, school buses served only 1.6 per cent of public school students. The rest had to beat the bell on their own. By 1963-64, the percentage riding buses had risen to 38.7—15,560,000 out of the 40,187,000 public school students enrolled throughout the nation that year.

CARDS OF THANKS 25

In loving memory of Russell E. Long, who was killed in a car accident Nov. 21, 1963.

As we look out beyond tomorrow
See the future so dark and gloom
We wonder if up in Heaven,
You know will be there soon
You left us so quick, and suddenly
No time for a tender kiss
Not even a tear or sigh
No time for a hurried goodbye
Yet you'd have wanted it that way
Had you known, you to would have feared
But God took your hand so gently
And whispered, "it was for you I cared."
You accidently went and left us
In Heaven, you'll find sweet rest
Up there with the Heavenly Savior
You'll live in the riches bliss
No troubles or trials to confront you
No nothing but the Great Love of God.
We know you're Happy our darling
While yet on the earth we must tred.
No matter what we see in the future
Heaven is our eternal goal
Will be at home forever
On the beautiful home of the soul.
Sadly missed by your family
Mrs. Delores Long, Evelyn, Linda, Jim and Vest Long.

cost would be $5,408,257 and local cost could be $2,462,530.

No. 4 -- 1.5 miles levee construction, 214 miles channel improvements and a 1,000 c.f.s. capacity pumping plant, at a total cost of $6,620,578. Federal cost would be $4,516, 258 and local cost of $2,104,320. The plan would be the same as plan three, except for the floodgates.

There are 274,050 acres of bottomland and 2,950 acres of upland in the watershed. About 60 per cent of the soil in the watershed is poorly drained and in the single flood year of 1961, 27,000 acres below the elevation of 294.8 feet were flooded.

A letter received from the corps of engineers at Memphis Oct. 10, stated:

"When funds are made available for initiation of the studies, it is proposed that a joint study in both the St. Johns Bayou and New Madrid floodway areas be undertaken. It is further proposed if a joint study is made, that the Corps of Engineers assume the responsibility for providing the major drainage outlets, including pumping stations and floodgates as required, and that the Soil Conservation Service assume responsibility for the upstream improvements."

The cost sharing would be approximately $3,306,150 for St. Johns portion, and $1,102,050 for St. James portion, and included in the funds estimates are $48,190 and $16,060 of federal funds needed in addition to funds now available.

Broken down by county costs proportions of the St. Johns basin, in New Madrid county would be $1,048,609, engineering costs $320,688 other service $146,714, with credits of $503,255, easements and right of way $211,960 and others of $720,715, for total cost of $2,236,726.

In Scott county total construction cost of $832,164, engineering $253,983 and other costs of $116,195. With credits of $448,120 on construction, easements $172,095 and other costs of $625,215 for total institutional costs of $1,827,557.

Mississippi county, construction cost of $2,144,476, engineering $654,210 and other costs of $299,022. Credits of $1,085,550, easements $435,450 and other costs of $1,534,370, for a total of $4,632,078.

The annual cost per plan in St. Johns watershed for plan one, $314,505, plan two, $379,255, plan three $545,055 and plan four $480,305. The benefits derived from each plan in the St. Johns basin, for each dollar spent is plan one $1.35, plan two $1.61, plan three $1.19 and plan four $1.15.

new safety equipment and extended warranties on new cars.

He said average retail prices of 1967 models were $55 higher than last year's new models, but all but about $6 was due to improved quality.

But new car prices from September to October went up 4.2 per cent, largely because of the beginning of the new model year and lower dealer concessions on trading in old cars.

"Prices were higher for all types of consumer goods and services except food in grocery stores," said John W. Gracza, deputy assistant commissioner.

Housing costs rose four-tenths of 1 per cent, largely because of higher real estate taxes, insurance, mortage interest and repair and maintenance costs.

Clothing prices went up seven-tenths of 1 per cent, transportation nine-tenths and medical care eight-tenths, the bureau said.

Although retail grocery prices were down, restaurant meals were higher.

At the supermarket, meat prices dropped five-tenths of 1 per cent and fruits and vegetables fell 1.1 per cent. Eggs were up 4 per cent. Bread prices dropped about 1 per cent.

ALDRIN

at each other and said: 'Ah, it couldn't happen to us.' "Lovell said.

So, the two pilots resorted to their visual means of catching the fleeting target while not using the radar—something never done on a Gemini flight.

"I'm sort of glad we had radar failure because it gave us a chance to use the backup charts," Lovell added while noting that they were equipped with a sequence of secondary ways to complete the rendezvous.

"I think the maneuvers we made were more accurate than those given on the ground," he said.

Aldrin's sojourns, highlighted by a stroll lasting 2 hours and 9 minutes, proved that by resting frequently and using proper restraint equipment, man can do meaningful work outside his capsule. Aldrin did not encounter the fatigue problems strollers before him met.

"I think we learned the great value of a restraint system," Aldrin said.

To do a series of seemingly innocuous tasks like hooking little rings to little hooks, Aldrin investigated the use of waist straps and restraint boots called "golden slippers."

Girl Has Good Reason to Doubt Thanksgiving Yarn

NORWICH, Kan. (AP)—Lisa Lowrey has good reason to question the traditional Thanksgiving yarn about Myles Standish, John Alden and Priscilla Mullines.

Lisa, 8, is a 14th generation descendant of Mr. and Mrs. John Alden, the Lowrey family history shows.

She believes "the courtship of Miles Standish" to be partly an invention of poet Henry Wadsworth Longfellow. The poet himself is a descendant of the persons in his famous poem but he may have exercised some license in writing of the family legend.

Even so, Lisa, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Lowrey says she likes to read Longfellow's account.

When the story became part of her third grade classroom work, Lisa told her family and Mrs. Lowrey pulled out a book on the family tree.

The Lowrey family history notes that Standish, who spelled his first name "Myles" was married for the second time before he came to America and that his wife, Barbara, came to this country in 1623.

John Alden and Priscilla, who had the family name of "Mullines," apparently developed a shipboard romance and were married without any interference from Standish, according to Lowrey history.

The family history notes that Myles and Barbara Standish had a son, Alexander, who married Sarah, daughter of John and Priscilla Alden.

Norris Nets 44-points In Puxico Victory

PUXICO -- The Puxico Indians extended their undefeated record to 6-0 last night by racing to a 94-72 home court triumph over the Bernie Mules behind a 44-point performance by Dale Norris.

Despite the final 22-point victory margin, the Indians' unbeaten mark appeared in danger of coming to an end as Bernie jumped into a 20-15 first quarter lead and continued to lead throughout most of the first three periods. However, Puxico made up a five-point deficit and won going away by piling up a 37-10 edge in the final quarter.

Besides Norris, who canned 28 of his points in the first half, the winners were led by King with 18. Craft topped Bernie with 24 and Botsch had 15.

Bernie salvaged a 72-70 win from preliminary B game action despite a high-scoring performance of 42 points by Andrews. Botsch led the Bernie victory attack with 21 tallies.

Puxico (94)

Norris 44, King 18, Anthony 14, Schott 11, Smith 5, Keith 2, and Zoll 2. FG 36, FT 22.

Bernie (72)

Craft 24, Botsch 15, Hoggard 13, Harley 10, Woods 6, Wilson 2, and Mayberry 2. FG 26, FT 20.

Johnson described the Gemini program as a worldwide effort, saying it would not have been possible without tracking locations and personnel provided by the United Kingdom, Australia, Bermuda, Malagasy, Mexico, Nigeria and Spain.

Later, the President meets with advisers on the troop level question. They will be his first official visitors since he flew to his Texas ranch last Saturday. He left Bethesda Naval Hospital three days after undergoing surgery for removal of a growth from a vocal cord and repair of an abdominal incisional hernia.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk, Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara, Presidential assistant Walt W. Rostow, who specializes in internal security affairs, and John J. McCloy were flying in from Washington for the conference.

cost would be $5,408,257 and local cost could be $2,462,530.

No. 4 -- 1.5 miles levee construction, 214 miles channel improvements and a 1,000 c.f.s. capacity pumping plant, at a total cost of $6,620,578. Federal cost would be $4,516, 258 and local cost of $2,104,320. The plan would be the same as plan three, except for the floodgates.

There are 274,050 acres of bottomland and 2,950 acres of upland in the watershed. About 60 per cent of the soil in the watershed is poorly drained and in the single flood year of 1961, 27,000 acres below the elevation of 294.8 feet were flooded.

A letter received from the corps of engineers at Memphis Oct. 10, stated:

"When funds are made available for initiation of the studies, it is proposed that a joint study in both the St. Johns Bayou and New Madrid floodway areas be undertaken. It is further proposed if a joint study is made, that the Corps of Engineers assume the responsibility for providing the major drainage outlets, including pumping stations and floodgates as required, and that the Soil Conservation Service assume responsibility for the upstream improvements."

The cost sharing would be approximately $3,306,150 for St. Johns portion, and $1,102,050 for St. James portion, and included in the funds estimates are $48,190 and $16,060 of federal funds needed in addition to funds now available.

Broken down by county costs proportions of the St. Johns basin, in New Madrid county would be $1,048,609, engineering costs $320,688 other service $146,714, with credits of $503,255, easements and right of way $211,960 and others of $720,715, for total cost of $2,236,726.

In Scott county total construction cost of $832,164, engineering $253,983 and other costs of $116,195. With credits of $448,120 on construction, easements $172,095 and other costs of $625,215 for total institutional costs of $1,827,557.

Mississippi county, construction cost of $2,144,476, engineering $654,210 and other costs of $299,022. Credits of $1,085,550, easements $435,450 and other costs of $1,534,370, for a total of $4,632,078.

The annual cost per plan in St. Johns watershed for plan one, $314,505, plan two, $379,255, plan three $545,055 and plan four $480,305. The benefits derived from each plan in the St. Johns basin, for each dollar spent is plan one $1.35, plan two $1.61, plan three $1.19 and plan four $1.15.

new safety equipment and extended warranties on new cars.

He said average retail prices of 1967 models were $55 higher than last year's new models, but all but about $6 was due to improved quality.

But new car prices from September to October went up 4.2 per cent, largely because of the beginning of the new model year and lower dealer concessions on trading in old cars.

"Prices were higher for all types of consumer goods and services except food in grocery stores," said John W. Gracza, deputy assistant commissioner.

Housing costs rose four-tenths of 1 per cent, largely because of higher real estate taxes, insurance, mortage interest and repair and maintenance costs.

Clothing prices went up seven-tenths of 1 per cent, transportation nine-tenths and medical care eight-tenths, the bureau said.

Although retail grocery prices were down, restaurant meals were higher.

At the supermarket, meat prices dropped five-tenths of 1 per cent and fruits and vegetables fell 1.1 per cent. Eggs were up 4 per cent. Bread prices dropped about 1 per cent.

Girl Has Good Reason to Doubt Thanksgiving Yarn

NORWICH, Kan. (AP)—Lisa Lowrey has good reason to question the traditional Thanksgiving yarn about Myles Standish, John Alden and Priscilla Mullines.

Lisa, 8, is a 14th generation descendant of Mr. and Mrs. John Alden, the Lowrey family history shows.

She believes "the courtship of Miles Standish" to be partly an invention of poet Henry Wadsworth Longfellow. The poet himself is a descendant of the persons in his famous poem but he may have exercised some license in writing of the family legend.

Even so, Lisa, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Lowrey says she likes to read Longfellow's account.

When the story became part of her third grade classroom work, Lisa told her family and Mrs. Lowrey pulled out a book on the family tree.

The Lowrey family history notes that Standish, who spelled his first name "Myles" was married for the second time before he came to America and that his wife, Barbara, came to this country in 1623.

John Alden and Priscilla, who had the family name of "Mullines," apparently developed a shipboard romance and were married without any interference from Standish, according to Lowrey history.

The family history notes that Myles and Barbara Standish had a son, Alexander, who married Sarah, daughter of John and Priscilla Alden.

Norris Nets 44-points In Puxico Victory

PUXICO -- The Puxico Indians extended their undefeated record to 6-0 last night by racing to a 94-72 home court triumph over the Bernie Mules behind a 44-point performance by Dale Norris.

Despite the final 22-point victory margin, the Indians' unbeaten mark appeared in danger of coming to an end as Bernie jumped into a 20-15 first quarter lead and continued to lead throughout most of the first three periods. However, Puxico made up a five-point deficit and won going away by piling up a 37-10 edge in the final quarter.

Besides Norris, who canned 28 of his points in the first half, the winners were led by King with 18. Craft topped Bernie with 24 and Botsch had 15.

Bernie salvaged a 72-70 win from preliminary B game action despite a high-scoring performance of 42 points by Andrews. Botsch led the Bernie victory attack with 21 tallies.

Puxico (94)
Norris 44, King 18, Anthony 14, Schott 11, Smith 5, Keith 2, and Zoll 2. FG 36, FT 22.

Bernie (72)
Craft 24, Botsch 15, Hoggard 13, Harley 10, Woods 6, Wilson 2, and Mayberry 2. FG 26, FT 20.

Johnson described the Gemini program as a worldwide effort, saying it would not have been possible without tracking locations and personnel provided by the United Kingdom, Australia, Bermuda, Malagasy, Mexico, Nigeria and Spain.

Later, the President meets with advisers on the troop level question. They will be his first official visitors since he flew to his Texas ranch last Saturday. He left Bethesda Naval Hospital three days after undergoing surgery for removal of a growth from a vocal cord and repair of an abdominal incisional hernia.

at each other and said: 'Ah, it couldn't happen to us.' "Lovell said.

So, the two pilots resorted to their visual means of catching the fleeting target while not using the radar—something never done on a Gemini flight.

"I'm sort of glad we had radar failure because it gave us a chance to use the backup charts," Lovell added while noting that they were equipped with a sequence of secondary ways to complete the rendezvous.

"I think the maneuvers we made were more accurate than those given on the ground," he said.

Aldrin's sojourns, highlighted by a stroll lasting 2 hours and 9 minutes, proved that by resting frequently and using proper restraint equipment, man can do meaningful work outside his capsule. Aldrin did not encounter the fatigue problems strollers before him met.

"I think we learned the great value of a restraint system," Aldrin said.

To do a series of seemingly innocuous tasks like hooking little rings to little hooks, Aldrin investigated the use of waist straps and restraint boots called "golden slippers."

Extension Council Holds Annual Achievement Day

The Scott County Home Economics Extension Council held its annual Achievement Day Nov. 10 at the Security National Bank.

The theme of the Achievement Day was "Associated Country Women of the World Links Country Women Throughout The World."

As the women arrived they were served coffee and doughnuts from a table featuring the Thanksgiving motif. Serving the coffee were Mrs. Judy Birk, president of the Lusk Exension Club and Mrs. Leon Essner, president of the New Hamburg Club.

The meeting was called to order by Mrs. Harold Uthoff, chairman of the Achievement Day Committee. She introduced Mrs. Ed Howard, vice president of the council, who led the women in the Club Collect and Pledge to the Flag.

Mrs. Uthoff introduced Mrs Bernard Brown, president of the Missouri Extension Homemakers Association, who presented a slide story of the triannual meeting of the "Association of Country Women of the World" held in Ireland last year. She presented the story of ACWW and Missouri's place and Scott County's place in the world association. Her many beautiful slides of Ireland helped to tell her story.

Mrs. Ed Howard conducted a short business meeting in the absence of Mrs. Ervin LeGrand, council president. At this time the group voted to change their name to the Scott County Extension Homemakers Association. They also voted to change the club dues for the coming year. The Association's Christmas Party will be Dec. 8 at the St. Denis Catholic church in Benton.

Mrs. Jerry Brasher, president of the Benton Town and Country Homemakers, led the group in some novelty songs and taught the new state song to the group.

Miss Mary Ann Finch, Area Extension Home Economist, presented the club Standard of Achievement Awards. These awards are presented to the clubs which accomplish the requirements as set up in the Standard of Achievement. The clubs awarded the Standards of Achievement were Better Homemakers Club of Scott City; Diehlstadt Extension Club; McMullin Club; and the Sikeston Young Homemakers. The Sikeston Young Homemakers Club received a special recognition for a new club which accomplished a great deal to receive this award.

The clubs who accomplished a special silver star award for achieving higher goals on their standard were Vanduser Club and Sikeston Extension Club.

Those clubs receiving the special gold star award for excellence were the Lusk Extension Club, the Benton Town and Country Homemakers and Aunt Ellen's Club of Sikeston.

The special blue ribbon club for 1966 was awarded to the New Hamburg Homemakers Club for achieving the highest Standard of Achievement for the past year. Assisting Miss Finch in awarding the certificates was Miss Martha Farris, Area Extension Home Economist.

OUR SERGEANT was always going out of his way to make life miserable for us, but it bothered him that he wasn't as popular as some of his easier-going mates. One day he overheard a young recruit from Texas speaking in glowing terms of anothr sergeant. "I'm sure you'd never speak up for me like that," he said bitterly.

The Texan looked at him with wide-eyed innocence, then drawled in an aggrieved tone, "Why, sarge, I don't believe I've ever heard your name mentioned that I haven't defended it!"

COFFEE CORNER
by Cherie

Well girls, it seems the column I wrote about Sunday afternoons, and the exciting way we spend them watching our husbands snore in front of the T. V. set, really hit home. In fact, it hit home so hard I've even gotten a little correspondence on the subject from a potential male Ann Landers, and since I feel I need to be fair about this subject or any other for that matter, I wish to print this letter, and let you see for yourselves the filmsy excuses put up as good reasons for why Sundays, should be theirs and not ours. Please pay close attention to how tired he is due to his nerve wracking week at the office, while all we've done is play bridge and whip up T. V. dinners! I feel the smartest thing this individual did is to sign this as an anonymous husband, otherwise he just might be stoned to death!!!

To:
(Mrs.) Cherri Blanton,
Columnist (ess)
Daily Sikeston Standard
Sikeston, Mo.

Madam:

I read your last article regarding your husband, Three-Eye. (Charles, as you referred to) and, in fact I was FORCED to read it by you know who -- my ever-loving wife! It just happened to express her feelings about me --which she delighted in. In fact to such an extent that she purchased several copies of that issue and now, besides going to the extent of having it copied in LARGE print so that it could be, in some devious manner, large enough to be read 8 feet away from the family room divan so that when attached to the TV set it glows the minute I turn the TV on a foot - ball game, not only that I see it (pasted, glued -- what does it matter) at the foot of our bed -- MY SIDE -- when I am in a certain place in the john, when I start to shave -- many other places too numerous to mention. BROTHER! That's all she was waiting for.

Now, in defense of Three-Eye and all other male sports lovers (In-door type) may I say this -- no offense mind you. You said something about his sleeping (and snoring) while the game was in progress and how could he possibly know or hear what's going on in the game! I believe I remember from way back -- and I do mean WAY BACK -- something about "Woman's intuition" -- I think that's the correct definition, something about a female's ability to foresee or know what's going on even tho not there--? Well, you women of course will not believe it but we sportsmen have a sort of built in radar system that allows us to sleep and still hear the game so naturally when someone (Stealthily) turns the set off suddenly, it of course reacts in such way that startles us and of course makes us jump up -- just cannot help it. We husbands, also are aware of the many cares and duties of the wife such as watching soap-box operas, washing dishes occassionally (with automatic dish - washer of course), dressing the kids, playing bridge in the afternoon, whipping up a T. V. dinner etc. -- but please try to remember, when you see that poor tired guy on the divan (prone of course) ne's had a rough week, tremendous responsibilities in making ends meet financially, I could name many other nerve wracking things he has had to go through all the week -- he -- all of us husbands -- deserve a little repose on Sundays. I believe that if there were such a peson as a "male" Ann Landers he (or she) would offer you this advice -- why not try to get interested in the things that said husband is interested in -- that way many marriages (mental cruelty) could be saved. BELIEVE ME -- we need a MALE ANN LANDERS.

In closing -- and please again no offense nor is this meant personally -- do you happen to snore at NIGHTS?

Naturally I can only dare to signoff as--

An anonymous sports--loving husband.

I feel that the best thing this fellow(poor misguided soul) had better do now is to run in the kitchen and whip up a little dinner to placate his wife after all those inane remarks. So ADAM Landers, I give you a little recipe to get you back in the good graces of your family!

MEATBALLS - PARMIGIANA CASSEROLE

1 pkg. (8 oz.) medium noodles
Cook as directed, drain. Preheat oven to 375 degrees.

In medium saucepan, combine:

1 can (15½ oz.) meatballs with brown gravy
2 cans (8 oz. each) spaghetti sauce with mushrooms.
1 tsp, dried oregano leaves

Bring this to a boil, stirring. Remove from heat.

In 1½ quart casserole, layer half of noodles with half of meatball mixture. Dot with ½ of cheese mixture, which is 1 (8 oz.) pkg. of cream - style cottage cheese
1 tbs. grated Parmesan cheese.

Now repeat the layer mixture, and bake 20 - 25 minutes.

France Votes Against U.N. Study Plan

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — France rejected today a proposed U.N. study of the China problem as unrealistic, and declared that the only way to end the 16-year stalemate is to hand the Chinese seat in the United Nations to the Peking government.

French Ambassador Roger Seydoux told the U.N. General Assembly that the presence of Red China is "politically indispensable" for the world organization if it wishes to search for peace in Asia.

In a speech that stressed once more France's split with the United States on the China issue, Seydoux urged support of a resolution sponsored by Albania, Cambodia and nine other Communist and nonaligned nations calling for the expulsion of Nationalist China and the seating of Peking.

He also opposed a U.S.-sponsored resolution to reaffirm previous assembly decisions that the China representation problem is an "important question" and therefore requires a two - thirds majority. As to the proposal for a U. S. study of the China problem, Seydoux noted that such a study already had been made in 1950 - 1951 and declared: "We all know the results."

"It does not seem to us either opportune or realistic to propose after 16 years of discussions, the creatipn of an organ having for its mission to explore and study this problem, with the objective of suggesting and equitable and practical solution," he said.

The feud between Moscow and Peking was reflected in the lukewarm support the Soviet Union is giving to the current move to seat the Chinese Communists.

ABOARD a nuclear submarine stationed in Scotland, I was a tour guide for a group of young Scottish scouts. At the end of the tour, I asked if there were any questions. One youngster in knee pants looked at me seriously and said, "Yes. I was wondering what would happen if a father whale ever mistook the sub for a mother?"

Man Exchanges President Sketches For Autographs

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) - C. B. Edwards, 82, draws pictures of presidents in exchange for their autographs.

He said he long ago realized that famous people are hard to reach so he devised his own system of addressing letters.

He draws a sketch of the famous addressee on the envelope along with the words "To. . . .U. S. A."

He started this when Woodrow Wilson was president and has a signature from several presidents since that time. Wilson didn't respond with a signature.

"I don't recollect asking him for one," Edwards said.

Presidential signatures he has received in response to such letters include Theodore Roosevelt, Harry S. Truman, Dwight Eiserhower, John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson.

Also among his famous name autographs are Jacqueline Kennedy and Douglas MacArthur.

"It has been a novel way of collecting signatures," he said. "I get the signature and they get the sketch to put in their collections.

"We both are happy."

The theme of the Achievement Day was "Associated Country Women of the World Links Country Women Throughout The World."

As the women arrived they were served coffee and doughnuts from a table featuring the Thanksgiving motif. Serving the coffee were Mrs. Judy Birk, president of the Lusk Exension Club and Mrs. Leon Essner, president of the New Hamburg Club.

The meeting was called to order by Mrs. Harold Uthoff, chairman of the Achievement Day Committee. She introduced Mrs. Ed Howard, vice president of the council, who led the women in the Club Collect and Pledge to the Flag.

Mrs. Uthoff introduced Mrs Bernard Brown, president of the Missouri Extension Homemakers Association, who presented a slide story of the triannual meeting of the "Association of Country Women of the World" held in Ireland last year. She presented the story of ACWW and Missouri's place and Scott County's place in the world association. Her many beautiful slides of Ireland helped to tell her story.

Mrs. Ed Howard conducted a short business meeting in the absence of Mrs. Ervin LeGrand, council president. At this time the group voted to change their name to the Scott County Extension Homemakers Association. They also voted to change the club dues for the coming year. The Association's Christmas Party will be Dec. 8 at the St. Denis Catholic church in Benton.

Mrs. Jerry Brasher, president of the Benton Town and Country Homemakers, led the group in some novelty songs and taught the new state song to the group.

Miss Mary Ann Finch, Area Extension Home Economist, presented the club Standard of Achievement Awards. These awards are presented to the clubs which accomplish the requirements as set up in the Standard of Achievement. The clubs awarded the Standards of Achievement were Better Homemakers Club of Scott City; Diehlstadt Extension Club; McMullin Club; and the Sikeston Young Homemakers. The Sikeston Young Homemakers Club received a special recognition for a new club which accomplished a great deal to receive this award.

The clubs who accomplished a special silver star award for achieving higher goals on their standard were Vanduser Club and Sikeston Extension Club.

Those clubs receiving the special gold star award for excellence were the Lusk Extension Club, the Benton Town and Country Homemakers and Aunt Ellen's Club of Sikeston.

The special blue ribbon club for 1966 was awarded to the New Hamburg Homemakers Club for achieving the highest Standard of Achievement for the past year. Assisting Miss Finch in awarding the certificates was Miss Martha Farris, Area Extension Home Economist.

OUR SERGEANT was always going out of his way to make life miserable for us, but it bothered him that he wasn't as popular as some of his easier-going mates. One day he overheard a young recruit from Texas speaking in glowing terms of anothr sergeant. "I'm sure you'd never speak up for me like that," he said bitterly.

The Texan looked at him with wide-eyed innocence, then drawled in an aggrieved tone, "Why, sarge, I don't believe I've ever heard your name mentioned that I haven't defended it!"

COFFEE CORNER
by Cherie

Well girls, it seems the column I wrote about Sunday afternoons, and the exciting way we spend them watching our husbands snore in front of the T. V. set, really hit home. In fact, it hit home so hard I've even gotten a little correspondence on the subject from a potential male Ann Landers, and since I feel I need to be fair about this subject or any other for that matter, I wish to print this letter, and let you see for yourselves the filmsy excuses put up as good reasons for why Sundays, should be theirs and not ours. Please pay close attention to how tired he is due to his nerve wracking week at the office, while all we've done is play bridge and whip up T. V. dinners! I feel the smartest thing this individual did is to sign this as an anonymous husband, otherwise he just might be stoned to death!!!

To:
(Mrs.) Cherri Blanton,
Columnist (ess)
Daily Sikeston Standard
Sikeston, Mo.

Madam:

I read your last article regarding your husband, Three-Eye. (Charles, as you referred to) and, in fact I was FORCED to read it by you know who -- my ever-loving wife! It just happened to express her feelings about me --which she delighted in. In fact to such an extent that she purchased several copies of that issue and now, besides going to the extent of having it copied in LARGE print so that it could be, in some devious manner, large enough to be read 8 feet away from the family room divan so that when attached to the TV set it glows the minute I turn the TV on a foot - ball game, not only that I see it (pasted, glued -- what does it matter) at the foot of our bed -- MY SIDE -- when I am in a certain place in the john, when I start to shave -- many other places too numerous to mention. BROTHER! That's all she was waiting for.

Now, in defense of Three-Eye and all other male sports lovers (In-door type) may I say this -- no offense mind you. You said something about his sleeping (and snoring) while the game was in progress and how could he possibly know or hear what's going on in the game! I believe I remember from way back -- and I do mean WAY BACK -- something about "Woman's intuition" -- I think that's the correct definition, something about a female's ability to foresee or know what's going on even tho not there--? Well, you women of course will not believe it but we sportsmen have a sort of built in radar system that allows us to sleep and still hear the game so naturally when someone (Stealthily) turns the set off suddenly, it of course reacts in such way that startles us and of course makes us jump up -- just cannot help it. We husbands, also are aware of the many cares and duties of the wife such as watching soap-box operas, washing dishes occassionally (with automatic dish - washer of course), dressing the kids, playing bridge in the afternoon, whipping up a T. V. dinner etc. -- but please try to remember, when you see that poor tired guy on the divan (prone of course) ne's had a rough week, tremendous responsibilities in making ends meet financially, I could name many other nerve wracking things he has had to go through all the week -- he -- all of us husbands -- deserve a little repose on Sundays. I believe that if there were such a peson as a "male" Ann Landers he (or she) would offer you this advice -- why not try to get interested in the things that said husband is interested in -- that way many marriages (mental cruelty) could be saved. BELIEVE ME -- we need a MALE ANN LANDERS.

In closing -- and please again no offense nor is this meant personally -- do you happen to snore at NIGHTS?

Naturally I can only dare to signoff as--

An anonymous sports--loving husband.

I feel that the best thing this fellow (poor misguided soul) had better do now is to run in the kitchen and whip up a little dinner to placate his wife after all those inane remarks. So ADAM Landers, I give you a little recipe to get you back in the good graces of your family!

MEATBALLS - PARMIGIANA CASSEROLE

1 pkg. (8 oz.) medium noodles
Cook as directed, drain. Preheat oven to 375 degrees.

In medium saucepan, combine:

1 can (15½ oz.) meatballs with brown gravy
2 cans (8 oz. each) spaghetti sauce with mushrooms.
1 tsp, dried oregano leaves

Bring this to a boil, stirring. Remove from heat.

In 1½ quart casserole, layer half of noodles with half of meatball mixture. Dot with ½ of cheese mixture, which is 1 (8 oz.) pkg. of cream - style cottage cheese
1 tbs. grated Parmesan cheese.

France Votes Against U.N. Study Plan

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — France rejected today a proposed U.N. study of the China problem as unrealistic, and declared that the only way to end the 16-year stalemate is to hand the Chinese seat in the United Nations to the Peking government.

French Ambassador Roger Seydoux told the U.N. General Assembly that the presence of Red China is "politically indispensable" for the world organization if it wishes to search for peace in Asia.

In a speech that stressed once more France's split with the United States on the China issue, Seydoux urged support of a resolution sponsored by Albania, Cambodia and nine other Communist and nonaligned nations calling for the expulsion of Nationalist China and the seating of Peking.

He also opposed a U.S.-sponsored resolution to reaffirm previous assembly decisions that the China representation problem is an "important question" and therefore requires a two - thirds majority. As to the proposal for a U. S. study of the China problem, Seydoux noted that such a study already had been made in 1950 - 1951 and declared: "We all know the results."

"It does not seem to us either opportune or realistic to propose after 16 years of discussions, the creatipn of an organ having for its mission to explore and study this problem, with the objective of suggesting and equitable and practical solution," he said.

The feud between Moscow and Peking was reflected in the lukewarm support the Soviet Union is giving to the current move to seat the Chinese Communists.

ABOARD a nuclear submarine stationed in Scotland, I was a tour guide for a group of young Scottish scouts. At the end of the tour, I asked if there were any questions. One youngster in knee pants looked at me seriously and said, "Yes. I was wondering what would happen if a father whale ever mistook the sub for a mother?"

Man Exchanges President Sketches For Autographs

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) - C. B. Edwards, 82, draws pictures of presidents in exchange for their autographs.

He said he long ago realized that famous people are hard to reach so he devised his own system of addressing letters.

He draws a sketch of the famous addressee on the envelope along with the words "To. . . .U. S. A."

He started this when Woodrow Wilson was president and has a signature from several presidents since that time. Wilson didn't respond with a signature.

"I don't recollect asking him for one," Edwards said.

Presidential signatures he has received in response to such letters include Theodore Roosevelt, Harry S. Truman, Dwight Eiserhower, John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson.

Also among his famous name autographs are Jacqueline Kennedy and Douglas MacArthur.

"It has been a novel way of collecting signatures," he said. "I get the signature and they get the sketch to put in their collections.

"We both are happy."

Driving through drought-stricken Iowa on our way home to California several years ago, we stopped in a small town to get something cool to drink. A farmer in a wide-straw hat and denims, who was sitting in the shade, remarked, "Yep, the corn's just about ready to dry up and blow away."

"When do you think it might rain?" we asked.

He smiled sagely. "Well, it'll rain when it always rains in Iowa--just before it's too late."

Mrs. Templeton Welch.

A Texan, visiting a friend in New York City, was being shown the Empire State Building.

"It's mighty tall," drawled the Texan, "but we have outhouses back in Texas that are taller."

The New Yorker remarked, "Yes, and you certainly need them!" Robert Miller

Today In U.S. History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Wednesday, Nov. 23, the 327th day of 1966. There are 38 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1774, the Minutemen were organized by an act of the provincial congress.

On this date:

In 1899, the American government extended its postage rates to Puerto Rico, Guam and the Philippines.

In 1940, Romania signed the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo pact.

In 1942, President Franklin D. Roosevelt signed the bill authorizing the establishment of the "Spars," the historic Battle of of the Coast Guard.

In 1943, the historic Battle of Tarawa came to a victorious conclusion.

Ten years ago — Egypt was reported to be preparing to deport Jews in Egypt accused of being in collaboration with British, French and Israeli forces.

Five years ago — An Argentine airlines jet air liner crashed after take-off from Sao Paolo, Brazil, killing all 52 persons aboard.

One year ago — Communist North Viet Nam's President Ho Chi Minh reiterated his condition for peace negotiations on the South Viet Nam war -- the complete withdrawal of American troops from Viet Nam.

Two coeds thoughfully walked away from the college chapel where the chaplain had delivered a forceful sermon on the Ten Commandments.

"Well," one said finally, "at least we have never made graven images."

Hatlo's They'll Do It Every Time

I HAD MY HEART set on becoming a Marine and had got through the usual tests at the local recruiting office. Only the eye examination remained. My uncorrect vision had always been pretty bad, but over the years I'd managed to memorize most of the charts, and I was certain I could bluff my way through. Unfortunately, I found myself confronted with a battery of unfamiliar material. The doctor informed me that, as far as the Marines were concerned, one of the other services could have me.

"But there must be jobs in the Marines that can be handled by a person who wears glasses," I persisted. "How about some sort of light-duty assignment?"

"Son," he said, "in the Marines the only difference between light duty and regular duty is--the light-duty personnel go in with the second wave!"

John R. Elkenberg

ARTUR RUBINSTEIN, the pianist, and Michael Rubinstein, the banker, once lived in Paris on the same block. Frequently letters and telegrams addressed to one were delivered to the other. One day Michael came to Artur with a batch of telegrams. "These are for you," he said. "Please come with me and tell my wife that Louise of Vienna, Ilsa of Prague, Margaret of Budapest, etc., are your friends, not mine."

Artur opened his desk and produced a batch of telegrams that belonged to Michael. "I'll be glad to help you," he said, "if you'll do this for me. Tell my wife that the five million lire in the Bank of Rome and the two million pounds in the Bank of England are your money, not mine."

THE FAMILY CIRCUS By Bil Keane

"I can't sit on THAT!"

I HAD MY HEART set on becoming a Marine and had got through the usual tests at the local recruiting office. Only the eye examination remained. My uncorrect vision had always been pretty bad, but over the years I'd managed to memorize most of the charts, and I was certain I could bluff my way through. Unfortunately, I found myself confronted with a battery of unfamiliar material. The doctor informed me that, as far as the Marines were concerned, one of the other services could have me.

"But there must be jobs in the Marines that can be handled by a person who wears glasses," I persisted. "How about some sort of light-duty assignment?"

"Son," he said, "in the Marines the only difference between light duty and regular duty is--the light-duty personnel go in with the second wave!"

John R. Eikenberg

ARTUR RUBINSTEIN, the pianist, and Michael Rubinstein, the banker, once lived in Paris on the same block. Frequently letters and telegrams addressed to one were delivered to the other. One day Michael came to Artur with a batch of telegrams. "These are for you," he said. "Please come with me and tell my wife that Louise of Vienna, Ilsa of Prague, Margaret of Budapest, etc., are your friends, not mine."

Artur opened his desk and produced a batch of telegrams that belonged to Michael. "I'll be glad to help you," he said, "if you'll do this for me. Tell my wife that the five million lire in the Bank of Rome and the two million pounds in the Bank of England are your money, not mine."

Your Dental Health

PRECEDE: The following is one of a series of articles being presented by The Daily Standard in cooperation with the Scott County Dental Society.

Your dentist has a simple, painless test scientifically called "oral cytology" that may lead to early discovery of a curable mouth cancer.

Combine his test with a 2-minute monthly test of your own, and you'll be assured of detecting mouth cancer early enough for treatment.

Early detection of oral cancer is extremely important because it spreads easily to other parts of the body, and unless treated early results in a high death rate.

Some 36,000 Americans get oral cancer each year. One in every 1,000 men over 45 and a substantial number of women develop it.

Two out of three whose cancer is not discovered early may be expected to die of the disease within five years and among those who fail to obtain treatment, 80 per cent will die within 18 months after the cancer is discovered.

When your dentist checks for cancer, he'll take an oral smear -- a sample of the suspected lesion (sore) obtained by scraping the area with a cotton - tipped applicator, tongue depressor or metal blade. A clinical test, similar to that conducted to detect uterine cancer, determines whether oral cancer is present.

Here's the monthly test you can do at home as a supplement to your dentist's. Look for white patches, bleeding cracks and lumps.

1. Inspect your lips for a ragged lip line and a dry and scaly condition.

2. Pull your lower lip down and inspect your gums inside and out, front to back. If you see anything peculiar, put your finger to it, to see if it's mushy.

3. Throw your head back and look at the roof of your mouth. It should be a solid pink.

4. Open your mouth wide and look at the insides of your cheeks.

5. Stick your tongue out and inspect it all on all sides. Lift it high and look at the bumpy floor of the mouth.

6. Check your breath to be sure it has no more than the usual odor of early morning or strong foods.

7. Run your finger under your lower jaw to see if there are any unusual bumps.

You'll want to remember, however, that this monthly test is no substitute for a regular and thorough examination by your dentist. Beginning cancers are painless for a long time, and many are unlikely to be detected by self-examination.

Discovered early -- as they can be by your dentist -- they can be treated successfully.

Harvesting Grass

John Gould
in the Christian Science Monitor

LISBON FALLS, Maine -- Current conditions amongst haymakers, I believe threaten our stability. I was watching, which is still the best way to be a haymaker, the other day and saw a cool, deliberate, unruffled gentleman guiding equipment that was spewing bales of hay up into a cart. Harvesting grass is as sophisticated now as the deployment of heavy equipment when a state highway department gets a federal grant and moves in to destroy some historical site and put a road over it.

This haymaker could just as well have been a construction battalion readying a military invasion. A lush morning field, waving in the breezes of breakfast time, finds itself denuded in the vening, like an embarrassed gentleman who has just had his toupee blown off at a picnic, and the crop is methodically machined without any of the pleasures and dalliance that accrued back when haymaking was a prolonged fight against great odds and every wisp came to the barn by the sweat of the brow and with grateful acknowledgement all around.

Instead of a procession of high-speed equipment, even to the ultimate elevator that sets the bale on the topmost mow, in my good old days our only sophistication was an "unloader," which was a trackfork in the peak of the barn. When we got the hayrack in place for unloading we unhitched one horse and he worked the trackfork. We did have a mowing machine and a dump rake, horse-powered, but other than that the gear was a pitchfork and a man coming to work in the hayfield might bring his own.

I remember the crew, if that is the word, that assembled here one lovely July morning to start the massive task of housing some hundred tons of hay which the farm produced that particular year. Gramp was elderly but by no means beyond prodigious capacity for labor, and he was a talented taskmaster. His younger brother, who was then 78, had come home to aid in the haying and so, in my teens, had I. The old farm had no woman in that decade, so part of my job was getting the meals.

Two boys, both younger than I, had been retained and so had Bugleeye Bonville, who was not considered an intellectual giant but was strong in the back and always laid a wet rhubard leaf in the crown of his straw hat - a precaution that spared him the interruptions of sun strokes, he said. Mr. Bonville trimmed around apple trees with a hand scythe, mowed the swales, and after pitching a load on the rack would climb into the mow and distribute it while we boys hoisted it on the trackfork. Gramps's team handled the mower, which was a Buckeye that howled in the gear box fearfully, and then would shift over to the rack for hauling in. We had Bill, a retired track horse, for raking, and although his professional career was well in the past he would occasionally wander in his thoughts and kick up his heels and sprint.

Thus we hayed, a prolonged, laborious, back-testing, hot-sun task that went on and on into August. Each afternoon our crew was increased by the appearance of Mr. Thatcher, who was the farmer next below. He was 'changing work with Gramps, something that has passed from the scene. Gramps had helped him build a barn from timberlot to shingling, and he was paying back, hour by hour. After a few days, when Mr Thatcher heard that I set a good table, he began appearing about 11 o'clock and was thus entitled to a haymaker's dinner.

On early ground Gramp had set the pistons on the corn planter on the outside cams, thus making drills instead of hills, and he had a quarter-acre of green peas ready for haying. Down cellar was a barrel of salt pork. Under the pantry couner was a barrel of flour. The shed was full of beech wood. Sody and cream-tartar on the shelf. Down by the Gravenstein apple trees were some 20 hives of bees. Below the barn was a jungle of rhubarb. And the lower field was laid out to rows of beautiful strawberries. Then, handging in the cellarway, was a sugar-cured ham in its thick cotton-cloth jumper.

The green peas were cooked in a 16-quart kettle and decanted all a-steam into a huge bowl in the center of the table. A few immature Early Rose potatoes, the size of chestnuts, were cooked amongst them, and there was the essential small nugget of salt pork. Hot buttermilk biscuits with apple-blossom honey, and a slice of fried ham. A setting pan of cellar-cooled milk, with globs of cream in it. And for dessert, either strawberries and cream or stewed strawberries with rhubarb. This would clean up any biscuits left over. Mr. Thatcher would finally give up, and Mr. Bonville would eat a little time after that. Then they'd all go back to haying and after I finished the dishes I'd join them.

Along in the afternoon we'd get the day's last load in and the "help" and Mr. Thatcher would go home. I'd start supper and Gramp and Uncle would care for the horses and do the other evening chores. We'd sit a spell after supper, but not for long. The kerosene lamps didn't get lit. Off to bed, still daylight around the edges, and the next thing I knew I'd hear Gramps lighting a fire in the range and rattling the covers to let me know it was time to start breakfast. We'd be down in the dew-wet field, horses hitched in and the mower howling, when we heard the distant mill whistle at the village announcing work time for the poor people. By that time Mr. Bonville had already mown a couple of swaths off the swale, and observing that the day would be another scorcher he had gone to wet a rhubarb leaf. I never tried the wet leaf, myself, and I imagine today's hayfields are full of haymakers who never did, either. There are many other things they don't know about.

Personal Touch in Gifts

A HANDSOME GIFT BOX of stockings is sure inspiration for Santas of any age with a "woman problem." Firelite, a new kind of glitter stocking by Hanes is a glamorous new leg fashion for daytime wear (left). For your favorite girl, this lush terry robe from Royal was inspired by an Indian sari. Paisley pattern traced in gold Metlon enhances the kabuki sleeves and borders the hem. A narrow band of gold encircles the empire waist. With at-home wear at the height of its popularity, a terry robe in an unusual design is sure to be a yule hit.

James H. Owens, East Prairie, and Nancy C. Hackney, Matthews, married by the Rev. Charles W. Massey.

Spring had drawn out the green-thumbers in our block. With aching backs and sweating brows we had sown grass seed, raked in plant food, battled crabgrass. As the trim lawns took shape, we became increasingly annoyed about the one patch that was left dusty and untended. And the owner resisted every pointed remark designed to prod him into accepting his responsibility. Tempers were at the boiling point, until he made his purpose clear with a sign he posted: "This is a Game Preserve --for the following games: Marbles, Hopscotch, Cowboys and Indians, Mud Pies, Toy Soldiers."

Hazel Nicholas.

6. Check your breath to be sure it has no more than the usual odor of early morning or strong foods.

7. Run your finger under your lower jaw to see if there are any unusual bumps.

You'll want to remember, however, that this monthly test is no substitute for a regular and thorough examination by your dentist. Beginning cancers are painless for a long time, and many are unlikely to be detected by self-examination.

Discovered early -- as they can be by your dentist -- they can be treated successfully.

Harvesting Grass

John Gould
in the Christian Science Monitor

LISBON FALLS, Maine -- Current conditions amongst haymakers, I believe threaten our stability. I was watching, which is still the best way to be a haymaker, the other day and saw a cool, deliberate, unruffled gentleman guiding equipment that was spewing bales of hay up into a cart. Harvesting grass is as sophisticated now as the deployment of heavy equipment when a state highway department gets a federal grant and moves in to destroy some historical site and put a road over it.

This haymaker could just as well have been a construction battalion readying a military invasion. A lush morning field, waving in the breezes of breakfast time, finds itself denuded in the vening, like an embarrassed gentleman who has just had his toupee blown off at a picnic, and the crop is methodically machined without any of the pleasures and dalliance that accrued back when haymaking was a prolonged fight against great odds and every wisp came to the barn by the sweat of the brow and with grateful acknowledgement all around.

Instead of a procession of high-speed equipment, even to the ultimate elevator that sets the bale on the topmost mow, in my good old days our only sophistication was an "unloader," which was a trackfork in the peak of the barn. When we got the hayrack in place for unloading we unhitched one horse and he worked the trackfork. We did have a mowing machine and a dump rake, horse-powered, but other than that the gear was a pitchfork and a man coming to work in the hayfield might bring his own.

I remember the crew, if that is the word, that assembled here one lovely July morning to start the massive task of housing some hundred tons of hay which the farm produced that particular year. Gramp was elderly but by no means beyond prodigious capacity for labor, and he was a talented taskmaster. His younger brother, who was then 78, had come home to aid in the haying and so, in my teens, had I. The old farm had no woman in that decade, so part of my job was getting the meals.

Two boys, both younger than I, had been retained and so had Bugleeye Bonville, who was not considered an intellectual giant but was strong in the back and always laid a wet rhubard leaf in the crown of his straw hat - a precaution that spared him the interruptions of sun strokes, he said. Mr. Bonville trimmed around apple trees with a hand scythe, mowed the swales, and after pitching a load on the rack would climb into the mow and distribute it while we boys hoisted it on the trackfork. Gramps's team handled the mower, which was a Buckeye that howled in the gear box fearfully, and then would shift over to the rack for hauling in. We had Bill, a retired track horse, for raking, and although his professional career was well in the past he would occasionally wander in his thoughts and kick up his heels and sprint.

Thus we hayed, a prolonged, laborious, back-testing, hot-sun task that went on and on into August. Each afternoon our crew was increased by the appearance of Mr. Thatcher, who was the farmer next below. He was 'changing work with Gramps, something that has passed from the scene. Gramps had helped him build a barn from timberlot to shingling, and he was paying back, hour by hour. After a few days, when Mr. Thatcher heard that I set a good table, he began appearing about 11 o'clock and was thus entitled to a haymaker's dinner.

On early ground Gramp had set the pistons on the corn planter on the outside cams, thus making drills instead of hills, and he had a quarter-acre of green peas ready for haying. Down cellar was a barrel of salt pork. Under the pantry couner was a barrel of flour. The shed was full of beech wood. Sody and cream-tartar on the shelf. Down by the Gravenstein apple trees were some 20 hives of bees. Below the barn was a jungle of rhubarb. And the lower field was laid out to rows of beautiful strawberries. Then, handging in the cellarway, was a sugar-cured ham in its thick cotton-cloth jumper.

Personal Touch in Gifts

A HANDSOME GIFT BOX of stockings is sure inspiration for Santas of any age with a "woman problem." Firelite, a new kind of glitter stocking by Hanes is a glamorous new leg fashion for daytime wear (left). For your favorite girl, this lush terry robe from Royal was inspired by an Indian sari. Paisley pattern traced in gold Metlon enhances the kabuki sleeves and borders the hem. A narrow band of gold encircles the empire waist. With at-home wear at the height of its popularity, a terry robe in an unusual design is sure to be a yule hit.

The green peas were cooked in a 16-quart kettle and decanted all a-steam into a huge bowl in the center of the table. A few immature Early Rose potatoes, the size of chestnuts, were cooked amongst them, and there was the essential small nugget of salt pork. Hot buttermilk biscuits with apple-blossom honey, and a slice of fried ham. A setting pan of cellar-cooled milk, with globs of cream in it. And for dessert, either strawberries and cream or stewed strawberries with rhubarb. This would clean up any biscuits left over. Mr. Thatcher would finally give up, and Mr. Bonville would eat a little time after that. Then they'd all go back to haying and after I finished the dishes I'd join them.

Along in the afternoon we'd get the day's last load in and the "help" and Mr. Thatcher would go home. I'd start supper and Gramp and Uncle would care for the horses and do the other evening chores. We'd sit a spell after supper, but not for long. The kerosene lamps didn't get lit. Off to bed, still daylight around the edges, and the next thing I knew I'd hear Gramps lighting a fire in the range and rattling the covers to let me know it was time to start breakfast. We'd be down in the dew-wet field, horses hitched in and the mower howling, when we heard the distant mill whistle at the village announcing work time for the poor people. By that time Mr. Bonville had already mown a couple of swaths off the swale, and observing that the day would be another scorcher he had gone to wet a rhubarb leaf. I never tried the wet leaf, myself, and I imagine today's hayfields are full of haymakers who never did, either. There are many other things they don't know about.

Spring had drawn out the green-thumbers in our block. With aching backs and sweating brows we had sown grass seed, raked in plant food, battled crabgrass. As the trim lawns took shape, we became increasingly annoyed about the one patch that was left dusty and untended. And the owner resisted every pointed remark designed to prod him into accepting his responsibility. Tempers were at the boiling point, until he made his purpose clear with a sign he posted: "This is a Game Preserve --for the following games: Marbles, Hopscotch, Cowboys and Indians, Mud Pies, Toy Soldiers."

THE press continues to be filled with scandalous statements concerning the monumental waste and extravagance of the "War on Poverty" program, as administered by the Office of Economic Opportunity. We present a few of the highlights taken from a recent study of this subject by United States Senator Strom Thurmond.

An OEO official chartered a twin-engine airplane for a 200-mile flight to address a group of head-start pupils between the ages of five and six.

One local office of the "War on Poverty" furnished tuxedos to sixteen high school boys for their senior prom at a cost of $18 each.

Another office of OEO hired 16 men to work with youngsters, 13 of whom had criminal records for larceny, assault and battery, and moral charges involving minors. In many instances youths have been enrolled coming from families with incomes above the level of eligibility.

The extravagance of OEO administrators has reached scandalous proportions. A mathematics teacher making $4,780 was hired by OEO at a salary of $10,080. Projects of OEO have been staffed by hiring school teachers, often at double their previous salaries. Not only was this wasteful, but disastrous to the local school programs.

In one project, employee's salaries averaged 57 percent higher than the same people had been earning in their previous jobs. For instance, a welding instructor making $3,200 was hired for $9,780, and a physical education instructor making $4,600 was hired for $9,480.

In one area the "poverty grant" as $82,150. Of this amount $56,723 was budgeted for salaries, leaving only a little more than $25,000 for operations. One local OEO administrator defended his excessive salary scale by stating that he was paying out for salaries much less than the 70 percent average for the total poverty program.

Forty-four OEO officials in Washington draw almost $1 million annually. The deputy director gets $28,500, and three of his assistants $27,000 each. Forty others draw from just under $19,000 to $24,000 each.

In OEO there is one super-grade (high-pay level) official for every eighteen ordinary employees. In the Department of Agriculture there is one super-grade official for each 500 employees, and in the Department of Defense, one super-grade employee for each 1,000 ordinary employees.

Are the people defenseless against such robbery? Is the anti-poverty program creating a new group of nouveau riche while reducing the taxpayer to the poverty level?

Stream of Visitors to JFK Tomb Still Flowing

By ROBERT E. GEIGER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sometimes the visitors come in military cadence, or with the quick and happy step of school children, or in the contemplative way of the thoughtful citizen.

They still throng to the grave of John F. Kennedy, assassinated in Dallas, Tex., three years ago Tuesday.

By count and estimate more than 16 million persons have climbed the grassy slopes of Arlington National Cemetery to the graves of Kennedy and two of his children.

In the first few weeks there were more than 50,00 a day. Now there are not nearly so many, but a pleasant summer or spring day, or a holiday will draw many more thousands.

A new granite and marble memorial authorized by Congress is nearing completion. The simple grave outlined by a low white picket fence stands today in sharp contrast to the gleaming marble of the new memorial a few feet away.

The new site, to which the bodies of Kennedy and his two children, who died in infancy, will be moved next spring, includes a circular walkway, more than 200 feet across and an inscription wall of granite upon which are engraved quotations from the Kennedy inaugural speech of Jan. 20, 1960.

The eternal flame lighted by Kennedy's widow during the burial service will be moved to the new site and remain a central symbol. The light has gone out on occasion since the burial but the new one to be installed in the memorial has been tested in hurricane - force wind and simulated rain storms.

John Carl Warnecke, the architect who designed the memorial, attempted to keep it as simple as the expenditure of more than $2 million permitted.

A gray slate marker set flush with the ground will identify the president's grave and those of the children — Patrick Bouvier Kennedy and baby girl Kennedy.

The president's marker will be engraved with the words: John Fitzgerald Kennedy, 1917-1963.

The eternal flame may be seen on a clear night from the Lincoln Memorial, perhaps a mile or more across the Potomac River.

In its new location, the grave and the flickering flame will be in a straight line from the Lincoln Memorial to the Custis Lee Mansion at the crest of the hill overlooking the cemetery. The mansion was built in 1802 by George Washington Parke Custis, adopted grandson of President George Washington.

Thousands of mementos have been tossed upon Kennedy's grave in the three years since the assassination. They give some hint of the moods of the people who visit the grave and the emotions that stir them.

The mementos are gathered daily, packed and sent to the White House.

The great and the famous, kings and emperors, the ordinary and the obscure citizens of the world have been drawn to the grave.

What brings them?

Many motives.

A busload of children arrives on its Washington sightseeing tour. They pile out laughing and chattering with cameras dangling on their arms.

A group of nuns makes the walk around the grave, solemn and silent.

A cluster of businessmen, taking time out from a convention, arrives. They talk casually among themselves but stop for a moment in silence.

A woman came to the grave in a heavy downpour of rain. She told a cemetery worker: "I came all the way from Canada to see this grave and no rain is going to stop me now, or anything else."

Another visitor, asked what had drawn him to the grave, said of Kennedy: "He was a man of grace. He died too young, too needlessly. That has haunted me ever since he was killed. I wanted to come and see the place where he is buried."

Most of those coming alone appear thoughtful or sad as they reach the grave.

Many shed a tear.

WOVEN WEED-KILLER is this cloth that may prove to be the safest and most convenient way to apply herbicides to small garden plots. The loosely woven material, not yet on the market, is simply placed over the area to be protected from weeds. It decomposes before the end of the growing season. Developed by the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture, it can eliminate dangers of overspraying or the problems of liquid sprays drifting to flowers, trees and shrubs.

Our Lost Prestige

LOUIS LA COSS IN
The Globe-Democrat

During our 1960 presidential campaign John F. Kennedy made his pitch for election on the monotonous claim that United States prestige was at the lowest ebb in recent history, and that he alone could restore it. He was elected by a razor-edge majority and has been in office since January, 1961. Has our "lost" prestige been regained?

Materially we are the most powerful nation on earth, but where do we stand in relation to other countries which might be expected to follow our lead?

Our money is still solicited and accepted, but within two years we have lost ground in Latin America, in Europe, in the Middle East and in the Far East.

Since colonial days Canada has been our cordial friend. We succeeded within the year in allenating that high regard, one of the factors being an inept statement by Dean Rusk, the weakest Secretary of State within memory. Since the Canadian election we have made a great effort to regain ground lost in the Dominion. But we gained nothing in stature any place by offending a time-proven friend.

TAKE A LOOK at what has happened in Latin America and in the Caribbean sea, especially Cuba. In his annual message to Congress in December, 1823, President Monroe proclaimed a policy of the United States relating to European intervention in the Western Hemisphere. This policy was and is called the Monroe Doctrine. It recited that the United States could not view any interference with the governments of Central and South America "for the purpose of oppressing them or in any other manner controlling their destiny, by a European power, in any other light than as the manifestation of an unfriendly disposition toward the United States," and that the United States would regard further colonization of American territory by any European power as "dangerous to our peace and safety," and that the policy of the United States was not to interfere with the internal concerns of European powers but to cultivate friendly relations with them.

Later interpretations have put upon the United States occasional supervisory duties over Central American and South American countries so that the European powers would have no reasonable cause to intervene. Over the years the Doctrine has been applied to several European nations, including Spain, France and Great Britain.

The Monroe Doctrine was acknowledged in substance by European powers by admitting the United States to The Hague Conventions with the reservation that nothing within the document should be "construed to imply a relinquishment by the United States of its traditional attitude toward purely American questions."

This policy was explicitly acknowledged in Article 21 of the Covenant of the League of Nations. Thus over the years the United States' position in relation to European interference in the Western Hemisphere has been defined and accepted.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED in Cuba? Even during the Eisenhower Administration after Castro overthrew the Batista regime and announced in specific terms that he was a Marxist and a practicing Communist, no action was taken to halt Soviet infiltration in the island and only casual support was given to Cubans in exile in this country who were building up a revolt against Castro.

We failed to invoke the Monroe Doctrine then and the same supine attitude toward the Communists has been continued by President Kennedy.

He cannot plead the lack of accurate Intelligence reporting, as Eiserhower might do, because he had been warned, his own reconnaissance services informed him that the Russians were in Cuba in strength, that they had missile bases and that they were supporting Castro at every turn.

The President talked glowingly about how he confronted Khrushchev with the facts of Russian interference in Cuba and forced him to withdraw. But did Khrushchev withdraw? Was he humiliated? Scarcely. A few men and ships were sent back to Russia, but today there are more than 17,000 combat Russians still in Cuba and we are wondering how many missiles and of what kind are secreted in Cuban caves, ready for operation at the proper moment.

Have we invoked the Monroe Doctrine in this brazen invasion of the Western Hemisphere, which the Doctrine says is a "manifestation of an unfreiendly disposition toward the United States?"

What sort of an "image" of strength and power do we present to the world when the pipsqueak Castro, supported by the Soviet Union, arrogantly thumbs his nose at us -- and we do nothing?

He is protected in his action by President Kennedy who, as one of his "conditions" offered to Khrushchev, promised "no invasion" of Cuba.

HAS THIS CRAVEN attitude toward Castro and the Soviet Union enhanced our prestige in Latin America? There exists an Organization of American States, which is supposed to act for all Latin America in times of stress. It is supported by the United States.

At the Punta del Este Conference of the OAS held in January, 1962, a vote was taken to expel Cuba from that organization. Six nations -- Brazil, Argentina, Ecuador, Chile, Bolivia and Mexico-refused to agree to such expulsion. After much maneuvering the United States was able to find 14 favorable votes, "sufficient for approval but humiliating by implication."

Ruby Phillips, a New York Times correspondent in Cuba for more than 25 years, says the "six nations hid behind the pretext of non-intervention in the domestic affairs of another nation, but the truth of the matter was that Latin Americans -- no matter how much they may disclaim this -- admire and support naked force.

"They are not convinced that the United States is stronger than the Soviet Union and they want to be on the side of the winner. At the same time, they did not believe the United States would have the courage to refuse to permit them to participate in the twenty billion dollar Alliance for Progress, even if they refused to expel Cuba. And they have been proved right."

Strange words to be said about the United States. "Lack of courage" in anything we undertake is not the image we should present to the world. No wonder we have lost prestige among nations that should be our friends.

We alienated the friendship of Portugal and Belgium by our willingness to participate -- in fact we urged it -- in the wholly unnecessary United Nations intervention in The Congo.

We have permitted Russia to outmaneuver us in the United Nations; we have stood on the sidelines while upstart nations in Africa are made members of the United Nations, to such degree that they can outvote us when and if they please which is frequently.

We send troops and material to Laos which is 12,000 miles from Washington, D. C., to fight against Communism -- with dreary results -- and to nothing in Cuba which is only 90 miles away from our Florida coast.

In Laos and Viet Nam we are entangled with the Reds and getting nowhere. Our prestige in that area is low.

Meanwhile, in the role of a muddling do-gooder we are sending the Peace Corps around the world which in some instances may help underdeveloped countries but I haven't noticed that they are winning us any new allies, or have converted to our side the backsliders.

WHAT IS HAPPENING on the home front adds nothing to our prestige abroad. Other countries may ask -- and do -- what our capacity is for telling other people how to live when we can't handle a racial crisis without arresting children, dousing them with water and turning the dogs on them. The Alabama and Mississippi turmoil was grist for the Communist mill in every quarter of the globe.

There was a time not too long ago when we were advised to "speak softly and carry a big stick." We now speak in a loud voice, which to many carries little authority and they laugh at our "big stick."

We make "demands" on Russia, for instance, and nothing happens. Because we are rich we are courted by some, but we have lost the world leadership that is rightfully ours. We need not be a bully to be feared, but a judicious use of that ingredient might help us regain our lost prestige.

John F. Kennedy said he was going to remedy all this. He hasn't. When, oh when, is the United States going to talk again like the United States?

Near the California border, I stopped at a motel that advertised, "FREE TV," The manager asked if I wanted an $8 room or a $10 room.

"What's the difference?" I asked.

"The $10 room has the free TV," he replied.

Missouri Press Report

Sen. Edward V. Long

Have just received a report which shows Missouri farmers are exporting over $210 million worth of food and fibre this year. We have increased our farm exports by $54 million since 1959-1960.

According to the report, we are exporting over half of our wheat and grain sorghum sales, and one - fifth of our cotton sales.

Estimates now show U. S. farm exports may total over $7 billion for the $12 months period ending June, 1967.

Experts now predict Missourians will be using 57.3 billion kilowatt hours of electricity a year by 1980. We will be using 40.2 billion kilowatt hours more than we did in 1964.

In addition to hydro - electric power, Missouri will use 4.5 million tons of coal or coal equivalent a year by 1980 for power.

Missouri firms received over $961 million in defense and nondefense Federal contracts this year.

During October, 53 Missouri firms received contracts from Federal Agencies totaling $16,190,060.

Flood control and water conservation on the Osage River in western Missouri will be discussed 7:30 P.M., December 7th, in Butler. The meeting will be open to the public.

Included in the Corps of Engineer's study to be discussed are reservoirs in Missouri near Freeman, Harrisonville, Butler, and Nevada.

Total Federal and local costs of these projects is estimated to be $26,990,000.

In addition $873,000 worth of channel improvement is proposed for the Big Creek, upstream from the Johnson-Cass County line to Pleasant Hill, Missouri.

Passed by the Senate this year: A bill which I sponsored to create a volunteer corps for Americans age 60 and over. Corps members would provide assistance in local community improvement programs.

The Corps would provide opportunity for senior citizens who want to be useful but who have not been given the chance.

This bill did not win approval in the House. Believe we must make every effort next year to be sure this bill wins final Congressional approval.

Here's a cookie-baking tip if you have small children in the family: Make the first pan of cookies smaller than usual and without nuts. Add nuts to the remaining dough if you like.

Stream of Visitors to JFK Tomb Still Flowing

By ROBERT E. GEIGER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sometimes the visitors come in military cadence, or with the quick and happy step of school children, or in the contemplative way of the thoughtful citizen.

They still throng to the grave of John F. Kennedy, assassinated in Dallas, Tex., three years ago Tuesday.

By count and estimate more than 16 million persons have climbed the grassy slopes of Arlington National Cemetery to the graves of Kennedy and two of his children.

In the first few weeks there were more than 50,00 a day. Now there are not nearly so many, but a pleasant summer or spring day, or a holiday will draw many more thousands.

Visitors often wait an hour or two in line. Not long ago, wreath-laying ceremonies were averaging 15 a day.

A new granite and marble memorial authorized by Congress is nearing completion. The simple grave outlined by a low white picket fence stands today in sharp contrast to the gleaming marble of the new memorial a few feet away.

The new site, to which the bodies of Kennedy and his two children, who died in infancy, will be moved next spring, includes a circular walkway, more than 200 feet across and an inscription wall of granite upon which are engraved quotations from the Kennedy inaugural speech of Jan. 20, 1960.

The eternal flame lighted by Kennedy's widow during the burial service will be moved to the new site and remain a central symbol. The light has gone out on occasion since the burial but the new one to be installed in the memorial has been tested in hurricane - force wind and simulated rain storms.

John Carl Warnecke, the architect who designed the memorial, attempted to keep it as simple as the expenditure of more than $2 million permitted.

A gray slate marker set flush with the ground will identify the president's grave and those of the children — Patrick Bouvier Kennedy and baby girl Kennedy.

The president's marker will be engraved with the words: John Fitzgerald Kennedy, 1917-1963.

The eternal flame may be seen on a clear night from the Lincoln Memorial, perhaps a mile or more across the Potomac River.

In its new location, the grave and the flickering flame will be in a straight line from the Lincoln Memorial to the Custis Lee Mansion at the crest of the hill overlooking the cemetery. The mansion was built in 1802 by George Washington Parke Custis, adopted grandson of President George Washington.

Thousands of mementos have been tossed upon Kennedy's grave in the three years since the assassination. They give some hint of the moods of the people who visit the grave and the emotions that stir them.

A baby's shoe, a religious medal, a scarlet flower, the berets and caps of military men, a torn page from a Bible with a marked passage were part of one day's offerings.

The mementos are gathered daily, packed and sent to the White House.

The great and the famous, kings and emperors, the ordinary and the obscure citizens of the world have been drawn to the grave.

What brings them?

Many motives.

A busload of children arrives on its Washington sightseeing tour. They pile out laughing and chattering with cameras dangling on their arms.

A group of nuns makes the walk around the grave, solemn and silent.

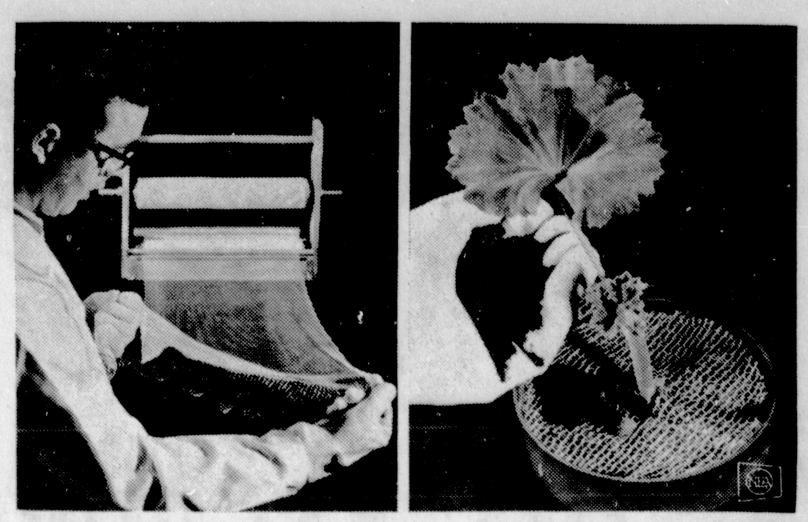
A cluster of businessmen, taking time out from a convention, arrives. They talk casually among themselves but stop for a moment in silence.

A woman came to the grave in a heavy downpour of rain. She told a cemetery worker: "I came all the way from Canada to see this grave and no rain is going to stop me now, or anything else."

Another visitor, asked what had drawn him to the grave, said of Kennedy: "He was a man of grace. He died too young, too needlessly. That has haunted me ever since he was killed. I wanted to come and see the place where he is buried."

Most of those coming alone appear thoughtful or sad as they reach the grave.

Many shed a tear.



WOVEN WEED-KILLER is this cloth that may prove to be the safest and most convenient way to apply herbicides to small garden plots. The loosely woven material, not yet on the market, is simply placed over the area to be protected from weeds. It decomposes before the end of the growing season. Developed by the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture, it can eliminate dangers of overspraying or the problems of liquid sprays drifting to flowers, trees and shrubs.

Our Lost Prestige

LOUIS LA COSS IN
The Globe-Democrat

During our 1960 presidential campaign John F. Kennedy made his pitch for election on the monotonous claim that United States prestige was at the lowest ebb in recent history, and that he alone could restore it. He was elected by a razor-edge majority and has been in office since January, 1961. Has our "lost" prestige been regained?

Materially we are the most powerful nation on earth, but where do we stand in relation to other countries which might be expected to follow our lead?

Our money is still solicited and accepted, but within two years we have lost ground in Latin America, in Europe, in the Middle East and in the Far East.

Since colonial days Canada has been our cordial friend. We succeeded within the year in allenating that high regard, one of the factors being an inept statement by Dean Rusk, the weakest Secretary of State within memory. Since the Canadian election we have made a great effort to regain ground lost in the Dominion. But we gained nothing in stature any place by offending a time-proven friend.

TAKE A LOOK at what has happened in Latin America and in the Caribbean sea, especially Cuba. In his annual message to Congress in December, 1823, President Monroe proclaimed a policy of the United States relating to European intervention in the Western Hemisphere. This policy was and is called the Monroe Doctrine.

It recited that the United States could not view any interference with the governments of Central and South America "for the purpose of oppressing them or in any other manner controlling their destiny, by a European power, in any other light than as the manifestation of an unfriendly disposition toward the United States," and that the United States would regard further colonization of American territory by any European power as "dangerous to our peace and safety," and that the policy of the United States was not to interfere with the internal concerns of European powers but to cultivate friendly relations with them.

STANDING OVATION -- For the homemaker who serves a splendid Standing Rib Roast of Beef for Christmas feasting. With the roast, Potato Onion Crowns and Green Beans Amandine.

Beef Roast Can Replace Gobbler

Christmas dinner is the good cook's finest hour. This gala meal is the culinary high point of the year, and every homemaker wants her Christmas menu to be recalled with pleasure during the season to follow. How about a succulent standing rib roast, pink and juicy inside, brown and crisp outside, to add luster to your holiday menu?

Traditions are made to be broken, and while the gobbler generally takes the spotlight at Christmas, this year a splendid roast beef might provide a wonderful change of pace.

Whether you prefer your beef as a standing rib roast or as rolled roast beef, keep in mind that fine flavor is the essence of the memorable roast. And, as for all beef dishes, Ac'cent wakes up all the "beefy" flavor of the meat -- and makes it seem jucier, too. Just sprinkle it on as director; those who like more may add it to the individual slice at the table.

For such special meat, the accompanying vegetables should be equally great. Potato Onion Crowns are just the ticket for bordering the beef platter. Mashed potatoes are put in mounds around the platter and topped with tender slices of sauteed Bermuda onions; the potato and onion combination complements the beef to perfection.

Green Beans Amandine also come to the party. Begin with frozen green beans, add seasoning, and top with toasted slivered almonds for a suave party touch. The Ac'cent goes into the vegetables as well as the meat, to wake up all the sleeping flavor of the potatoes and make the green beans seem garden fresh.

For Christmas dinner, flavor is the invisible element on the menu that is certain to make the meal you serve a splendid feast. Merry Christmas dinner!

RIB ROAST OF BEEF
5 to 7 lbs. rolled or standing rib roast of beef
1 tblsp. Ac'cent
Salt and pepper

Wipe meat with damp cloth or paper towel. If standing rib roast, stand on rib bones in shallow open pan; if rolled rib roast, place on rack with fat side up. Sprinkle meat with Ac'cent. Insert meat thermometer. Make sure pointed end of thermometer does not rest on bone, fat or gristle. Roast in a 325 degree oven as follows. For standing rib roast; rare, 22 minutes per pound (internal temperature 140 degrees); medium, 25 minutes per pound (internal temperature 160 degrees; well done, 30 minutes per pound (internal temperature 170 degrees). For rolled rib roast: rare, 30 minutes per pound (internal temperature 140 degrees; medium, 33 minutes per pound (internal temperature 160 degrees); well done, 40 minutes per pound (internal temperature 170 degrees).

YIELD: Allow 1/3 to 1/2 pound bone-in roast per serving, OR 1/4 pound boned roast per serving.

POTATO-ONION CROWNS
4 LBS. (12med.) potatoes, pared and cut up
1/2 c. plus 1/3 c. butter or margarine, divided
1 c. hot milk
1 1/2 tsp. Ac'cent
Salt and pepper
2 Bermuda onions, peeled and cut in 6 thick slices each

Cook potatoes in slightly salted boiling water in large covered saucepan 20 minutes, or until very tender. Drain; place over low heat 1 or 2 minutes to dry out, shaking pan gently. With potato masher or electric mixer, mash potatoes thoroughly until no lumps remain. Stir in 1/2 c. butter, then gradually beat in enough hot milk to make potatoes fluffy and creamy. Add Ac'cent salt and pepper. Cover potatoes and keep hot. Heat remaining 1/3 c. butter in large skillet; add half of onion slices and cook, turning only once, until lightly browned; remove. Add remaining onion slices to skillet and cook. Spoon potatoes in 12 mounds on serving platter. Top each with an onion slice.

YIELD: 12 servings.

GREEN BEANS AMANDINE
4 pkgs. (9 oz. ea.) frozen cut green beans
2 tsp. Ac'cent
6 tblsp. butter or margarine
3/4 c. toasted slivered almonds

Cook beans according to package directions. Drain; sprinkle with Ac'cent and toss gently. Keep beans hot. Heat butter with almonds in small saucepan. Turn beans into serving dish. Spoon almonds in a mound on top of beans; pour butter over all.

YIELD: 12 servings.

Consolidation Across County Lines Predicted

COLUMBIA, Mo (AP) - Sen. A. Basey Vanlandingham, D-Columbia, predicted Monday county lines will start to disappear within a decade and eventually Missouri will have only 25 to 30 "mega-counties" sharing mutual services.

Vanlandingham's forecast was in a speech delivered at a conference of county judges at the University of Missouri.

"Everything points toward consolidating the counties into governmental districts," he said. "Whether you like it or not, it is in the mill. It must come. All signs point to it. . .

"I believe that such government will be an actuality in this century. Our present governmental form has served us well in the past. But it is almost as antiquated in this jet and atomic and computer age as the ox cart. And like the ox cart, it will pass."

Vanlandingham said the transition will be as painless as school consolidation and in fact already has started as counties share planning and zoning services on a regional basis and as the office of county superintendent of schools slowly disappears.

He said a bill probably will be introduced in the 1967 legislature to provide for circuit attorneys to handle felony cases instead of county prosecutors as another step in the merger process.

Elections Bear Makeup Man's Views on Looks

By BOB THOMAS
AP Movie-Television Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — This month's elections, says a top-flight movie makeup man, confirmed the new rule for politicians: What you look like is more important than what you stand for.

Frank Westmore, member of the famed family of Hollywood makeup artists, cited the victories in major elections of vigorous, young-looking candidates: California's Ronald Reagan, Illinois' Charles Percy, Oregon's Mark Hatfield, etc.

"This is the heritage of John F. Kennedy, who brought the nation's attention to the young look," argues Westmore. "The Kennedy influence and the use of television for campaigning has completely altered politics in this country.

"It's the women who have brought this about. They vote largely on a candidate's appearance, and they will naturally favor a handsome, clean-cut man over an older, less appealing one. That's why Robert Taft could never have been elected president: He looked too much like a little old schoolteacher."

What actors have learned about presenting themselves to the public can be adopted by politicians, he declares — "and by businessmen, too, because older men are constantly being pressed by younger, more appealing men in business."

Westmore's primary advice: Look to your hair, men.

"The Kennedys have proved how hair can do wonders for a politician's image," he remarked. "Nowadays every politician should have his hair styled to bring out the best in his appearance.

For instance, Richard Nixon. His problem is the wide jaw. That line could be softened if he would lower his sideburns a quarter of an inch or so and build out the hair on the side of his head."

This matter of hair styling for men is not as fancy-dandyish as it sounds at first. Westmore reported that the nation's barbers are now coming around to what he and other makeup artists have long been doing for actors: fitting the hair to the individual head.

Chemists Claim Progess In Finding Key to Life

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Research chemists at Monsanto Co. say they have discovered that a poison, hydrogen cyanide, may have been the key to the origin of life.

Clifford N. Matthews, a Monsanto chemist, said Monday the experiments have resulted in a new theory on the origin of proteins, the main chemical substance in all life on earth.

He said the experiments also may result in the development of synthetic foods.

Matthews and Robert E. Moser, another scientist, said they mixed methane and ammonia. They then shot electricity through the gaseous mixture for about 24 hours. The electricity was representative of the high energy believed to abound in primitive earth.

The result was hydrogen cyanide gas which was allowed to stand and mix with itself.

"The result was a black solid," said Matthews and Moser. "Then we added water and the result was a brown scum which we believe once covered the earth.

Both scientists said the scum was full of protein-like chunks which contained amino acids, the natural ingredient of all natural proteins.

"From this scum, we apparently have emerged," said Matthews.

"We are saying that proteins came before amino acids," said Matthews. "Other researchers have said that amino acides came first.

He said that the easy production of the protein substances from the hydrogen cyanide may eventually result in the synthetic production of food in much the same manner.

The next step in the research is to clarify the reasons protein was produced in the experiment.

REAPPORTIONMENT

A Transmittal of Certain Resolutions Approved by the General Assembly of Virginia on December 3, 1964.

Whereas, the history of freedom is a history of the limitation of governmental power, as the concentration of such power inevitably precedes and insures the destruction of human liberties; and

Whereas, the Framers of the Constitution of the United States sought to protect and advance the cause of liberty primarily by distributing governmental power between the Nation and the States, each supreme within its sphere, thus of indestructible States; and

Whereas, this division of governmental power is a fundamental principle of our constitutional system, designed to insure to each State the right to establish such forms of local government as it thinks best suited to the interests, temper and customs of its people and most likely to effect the safety and happiness of its citizens; and

Whereas, in recent years, this foundation principle of our Government has been imperiled by the ever expanding power of the Federal judiciary, until at last the Supreme Court of the United States has undertaken to alter by judicial decree the very forms of Government under which we live; and

Whereas, the Constitution of the United States contemplates the separation of the legislative and judicial functions to distinct branches of the government; and

Whereas, the Constitution of the United States specifically reserves to the States or to the people thereof all powers not conferred upon the United States or denied to the States by said Constitution; and

Whereas, the apportionment of the several States for legislative representation is exclusively a legislative function reserved to the States and one which has never been delegated to the United States; and

Whereas, the Supreme Court of the United States, until recently, has historically denied jurisdiction to the Courts of the United States in suits or controversies regarding such apportionment; and

Whereas, Courts of the United States have now assumed the jurisdiction and authority not only to declare invalid the legislative actions of the several States regarding such apportionment, but the further jurisdiction and authority to exercise the legislative function and apportion the States by judicial decree; and

Whereas, such action by the Federal Courts endangers the very fabric of a republican form of Government.

Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Delegates, the Senate of Virginia concurring, That the Congress of the United States is hereby memorialized to call a convention for the purpose of proposing the following article as an amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

"Article ---

"Section 1. No provision of this Constitution, or any amendment thereto, shall restrict or limit any state in the apportionment of representation in its legislature.

"Section 2. The judicial power of the United states shall not extend to any suit in law or equity, or to any controversy relating to apportionment of representation in a state legislature.

"Section 3. This article shall be inoperative unless it shall have been ratified as an amendment to the Constitution by the Legislatures of three-fourths of the several states within seven years from the date of its submission."

Be it further resolved, That if Congress shall have proposed an amendment to the Constitutional identical with that contained in this resolution prior to January one, nineteen hundred sixty - six, this application for a convention shall no longer be of any force or effect.

Resolved further, That the Clerk of the House of Delegates is instructed to send copies of this resolution to the Secretary of the Senate of the United States, the Clerk of the House of Representatives of the United States, and to each member of the Congress from this State.

STANDING OVATION -- For the homemaker who serves a splendid Standing Rib Roast of Beef for Christmas feasting. With the roast, Potato Onion Crowns and Green Beans Amandine.

Beef Roast Can Replace Gobbler

Christmas dinner is the good cook's finest hour. This gala meal is the culinary high point of the year, and every homemaker wants her Christmas menu to be recalled with pleasure during the season to follow. How about a succulent standing rib roast, pink and juicy inside, brown and crisp outside, to add luster to your holiday menu?

Traditions are made to be broken, and while the gobbler generally takes the spotlight at Christmas, this year a splendid roast beef might provide a wonderful change of pace.

Whether you prefer your beef as a standing rib roast or as rolled roast beef, keep in mind that fine flavor is the essence of the memorable roast. And, as for all beef dishes, Ac'cent wakes up all the "beefy" flavor of the meat -- and makes it seem jucier, too. Just sprinkle it on as director; those who like more may add it to the individual slice at the table.

For such special meat, the accompanying vegetables should be equally great. Potato Onion Crowns are just the ticket for bordering the beef platter. Mashed potatoes are put in mounds around the platter and topped with tender slices of sauteed Bermuda onions; the potato and onion combination complements the beef to perfection.

Green Beans Amandine also come to the party. Begin with frozen green beans, add seasoning, and top with toasted slivered almonds for a suave party touch. The Ac'cent goes into the vegetables as well as the meat, to wake up all the sleeping flavor of the potatoes and make the green beans seem garden fresh.

For Christmas dinner, flavor is the invisible element on the menu that is certain to make the meal you serve a splendid feast. Merry Christmas dinner!

RIB ROAST OF BEEF
5 to 7 lbs. rolled or standing rib roast of beef
1 tblsp. Ac'cent
Salt and pepper

Wipe meat with damp cloth or paper towel. If standing rib roast, stand on rib bones in shallow open pan; if rolled rib roast, place on rack with fat side up. Sprinkle meat with Ac'cent. Insert meat thermometer. Make sure pointed end of thermometer does not rest on bone, fat or gristle. Roast in a 325 degree oven as follows. For standing rib roast; rare, 22 minutes per pound (internal temperature 140 degrees); medium, 25 minutes per pound (internal temperature 160 degrees); well done, 30 minutes per pound (internal temperature 170 degrees). For rolled rib roast; rare, 30 minutes per pound (internal temperature 140 degrees; medium, 33 minutes per pound (internal temperature 160 degrees); well done, 40 minutes per pound (internal temperature 170 degrees).

YIELD: Allow 1/3 to 1/2 pound bone-in roast per serving, OR 1/4 pound boned roast per serving.

POTATO-ONION CROWNS
4 LBS. (12med.) potatoes, pared and cut up
1/2 c. plus 1/3 c. butter or margarine, divided
1 c. hot milk
1 1/2 tsp. Ac'cent
Salt and pepper
2 Bermuda onions, peeled and cut in 6 thick slices each

Cook potatoes in slightly salted boiling water in large covered saucepan 20 minutes, or until very tender. Drain; place over low heat 1 or 2 minutes to dry out, shaking pan gently. With potato masher or electric mixer, mash potatoes thoroughly until no lumps remain. Stir in 1/2 c. butter, then gradually beat in enough hot milk to make potatoes fluffy and creamy. Add Ac'cent salt and pepper. Cover potatoes and keep hot. Heat remaining 1/3 c. butter in large skillet; add half of onion slices and cook, turning only once, until lightly browned; remove. Add remaining onion slices to skillet and cook. Spoon potatoes in 12 mounds on serving platter. Top each with an onion slice.

YIELD: 12 servings.

GREEN BEANS AMANDINE
4 pkgs. (9 oz. ea.) frozen cut green beans
2 tsp. Ac'cent
6 tblsp. butter or margarine
3/4 c. toasted slivered almonds

Cook beans according to package directions. Drain; sprinkle with Ac'cent and toss gently. Keep beans hot. Heat butter with almonds in small saucepan. Turn beans into serving dish. Spoon almonds in a mound on top of beans; pour butter over all.

YIELD: 12 servings.

Consolidation Across County Lines Predicted

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) - Sen. A. Basey Vanlandingham, D-Columbia, predicted Monday county lines will start to disappear within a decade and eventually Missouri will have only 25 to 30 "mega-counties" sharing mutual services.

Vanlandingham's forecast was in a speech delivered at a conference of county judges at the University of Missouri.

"Everything points toward consolidating the counties into governmental districts," he said. "Whether you like it or not, it is in the mill. It must come. All signs point to it. . .

"I believe that such government will be an actuality in this century. Our present governmental form has served us well in the past. But it is almost as antiquated in this jet and atomic and computer age as the ox cart. And like the ox cart, it will pass."

Vanlandingham said the transition will be as painless as school consolidation and in fact already has started as counties share planning and zoning services on a regional basis and as the office of county superintendent of schools slowly disappears.

He said a bill probably will be introduced in the 1967 legislature to provide for circuit attorneys to handle felony cases instead of county prosecutors as another step in the merger process.

Elections Bear Makeup Man's Views on Looks

By BOB THOMAS
AP Movie-Television Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — This month's elections, says a top-flight movie makeup man, confirmed the new rule for politicians: What you look like is more important than what you stand for.

Frank Westmore, member of the famed family of Hollywood makeup artists, cited the victories in major elections of vigorous, young-looking candidates: California's Ronald Reagan, Illinois' Charles Percy, Oregon's Mark Hatfield, etc.

"This is the heritage of John F. Kennedy, who brought the nation's attention to the young look," argues Westmore. "The Kennedy influence and the use of television for campaigning has completely altered politics in this country.

"It's the women who have brought this about. They vote largely on a candidate's appearance, and they will naturally favor a handsome, clean-cut man over an older, less appealing one. That's why Robert Taft could never have been elected president: He looked too much like a little old schoolteacher."

For instance, Richard Nixon. His problem is the wide jaw. That line could be softened if he would lower his sideburns a quarter of an inch or so and build out the hair on the side of his head."

This matter of hair styling for men is not as fancy-dandyish as it sounds at first. Westmore reported that the nation's barbers are now coming around to what he and other makeup artists have long been doing for actors: fitting the hair to the individual head.

Question Most Asked About Eternity

By J. Lester McGee, D.D.
Centenary Methodist Church
Saint Louis, Missouri

When you stop to think about it, the passing of time is the most impressive and frightening thing in life.

Years ago our church in Louisville gave us a beautiful Westminster Chimes mantle clock. For sixteen years now that clock has chimed for us every fifteen minutes -- day and night. When we first got it, it almost made a nervous wreck ing off the quarter hours. It seemed to say every time: "Now another 15 minutes have gone by, and you haven't done what you were supposed to do."

Someone has taken the hours of the day from six o'clock in the morning until midnight and compared them to the years of a life from birth to seventy years of age. And this is what he came up with:

If you're 15 years of age, it's 9:51 in the morning of your life.
If you're 20 years of age, it's 8 minutes after 11:00.
If you're 25 years of age, it's 12:25.
If you're 30, it's 1:42 in the afternoon.
If you're 35, it's 2:59 p.m.
If you're 40, it's 17 minutes past 4:00.
If you're 45, it's 5:33 p.m.
If you're 50, it's 6:50 p.m.
If you're 55, it's 7 minutes after 8:00.
If you're 60, it's 9:24.
If you're 65, its 41 minutes after 10:00.
If you're 70, it's approaching midnight.

Well, you can figure out your own time. I am painfully aware that it is already past daylight for me since my time is about 7:10 p.m. As I realize that, I begin to think that whatever I am going to do I had better get busy, if I am going to do it in my lifetime.

The temporal quality of life makes a tremendous impact on us. For instance, if we were to read in the newspapers today that the scientists had discovered that the world would come to an end within 50 years, it would make aprofound impression on us. But actually that very thing is true for most of us in this church this morning. Of course, there are many children and youth who have a good chance of living beyond 50 more years, but for the vast majority of us the world will come to an end within the next 50 years.

Of course, we die a little every day. If you are in the habit of looking in the mirror every morning you can see it, if you are an honest person. The lines are a little deeper, the grey a little more pronounced, a little less sparkl in the eyes.

I think God has made it that way on purpose to impress on us the transitory quality of this life, and to shout to us with every new day that we had better concentrate upon those things which do not pass - the eternal qualities of life.

With this in mind I should like to talk to you today on the subject: "Questions Most Asked About Eternity." And this isn't going to be anything psychological, or sociological. You see I am not attempting to be pedagogical, although what I am going to say has a theological category. It is called Eschatology. But be that as it is, I am merely trying to answer in a nutshell the questions you and many others have asked about Eternity.

The first one is Who Will Survive Eternity?

The answer is, I believe, Everyone. Everybody will survive death. The Scriptures indicate that there will be some who will desperately try not to do so. "There will be those who will cry for the rocks and the mountains to fall upon them.."

But survival after death is compulsory. Whether we choose to survive or not has nothing to do with it. We are created an eternal spirit, and whether we want to survive death does not matter. We will survive, all of us.

We are Spirits. We have bodies. I am a Spirit. I have and use a body. This eternal spirit within me which is the real me survives forever. We recognize this every day in our normal conversations. We recognize that we are not bodies. Have you ever noticed how we say: "She threw herself across the bed," "He nodded his head," "he drives himself unmercifully"? You see, in our everyday conversations we unconsciously recognize the fact that these bodies are not ourselves. We handle and control the body. We use it.

Sometimes people will say that life after death is wishful thinking. And the truth is that there are many times when we do not wish to survive. A man said to me not long ago: "But I don't want to live forever." It doesn't matter whether he wants to live or not. He will. He has no choice.

The second question often asked about eternity is: When Does Eternity Begin? Does it begin at death? Or on the Judgment Day? When is Judgment Day? When does Eternity begin?

I believe the answer is -- It Has Already Begun. We are in it now. Death is only an event on the long line of eternity, an event that will not change our essential character. But will change only the house in which we live. We are not going to be in eternity. We are in it now.

This is so true that if you are no in heaven today you will not be in it if you were to die at this minute. We are creating the quality of our eternity with the passing of every day.

The attitude of the real Christian is not "I will stand the troubles of this life and the unhappiness of this life so that I might have happiness in heaven after death." Any Christian who is just "suffering through" the unhappiness of this life in the hope of happiness after death is likely to be keenly disappointed. We must possess the Kingdom ere, if we are to possess it in its wonderful form after death.

When the Disciples asked Jesus: "When is Thy Kingdom coming?" He answered: "The Kingdom is already here. The Kingdom of Heaven is within you."

And only that which we have today of florious joy in Christian experience here can be multiplied infinitely in the life to come. We must possess the quality of it in this life, if we are to possess it beyond death. When does eternity begin? It has begun already. We are in it now.

The third question that is often asked about eternity is Where Is Heaven?

I believe the answer is: It dimension with a thin veil hanging between this life and the next. Let me illustrate it scientifically and yet in a way easily understood.

In this Sanctuary this morning there are many pictures floating around in the air. You don't see them, do you? But if we brought in a television set and tuned it in, turning from channel to channel, we would bring every one of those pictures into view.

There are many voices speaking and many musical instruments making sounds in this Sanctuary at this very minute. Yet you do not hear them, but let me turn on this radio and move from number to number o the dial. Believe it? Well, listen . . . . .

This, I think, is an illustration on a level understood by every one of us of the way Heaven is all about us. Yet there is a thin veil obscuring its beauties and bliss from our awareness. But there have been times in human history when God has allowed that veil to part -- the spiritual radio and television apparatus has been turned on momentarily --. It parted or Jesus, you remember, and for Peter, James and John on the Mount of Transfiguration. They talked to those on the other side. Not only Jesus saw them, but the disciples saw them.

This is the "beyond" within us, that sphere of reality higher than our fingers can reach and deeper than our minds can fathom.

I have seen many people die. How often they sit up in bed and look across the room as if looking into the distance, with a wonderful expression as if they were beginning to see through that veil. My dear old grandmother, who was a saint if I ever knew one, keep waving her hand for hours before she passed on in her nineties. She kept calling the name of my grandfather who had preceded her by many years.

Where Is Heaven? It is all about is in a 5th Dimension. An awareness of it is a 6th sense of a 5th Dimension. This isn't mysticism. It isn't spiritualism. It is a spiritual sensitivity reaching beyond the worl d of sight, sound, touch taste and smell. "Seeing that we are encompassed by such a great cloud of witnesses. . ."

The fourth question often asked about eternity is Will We Know Each Other? Will we know each other in Eternity?

I think the answer is Yes -- but a qualified yes.

We will know each other in eternity to the extent that we have known each other spiritually here.

Remember this about eternity -- any relationship that depends upon the physical only, or on money, or influence, or position in society, or even on personality, will not exist. We will know each other as we have communed with each other spiritually in this life.

It is conceivable that a husband and wife who have never known each other spiritually here will not know each other over there, because there are some people who live together and recognize each other physically and never really know each other spiritually. We will know others to the extent that we have known them spiritually here. No spiritual communication here -- no communication there . . . .

Another question often asked about eternity is Can We Enjoy Heaven Even If Loved Ones Are Not There?

I believe the answer is definitely yes. Our heaven does not depend upon any other person on the other side of death any more than it depends on any other person on this side of death. It is entirely possible for me to long for the salvation of my loved ones and still have total peace in my own soul. No man ever was burdened for the souls of men as Jesus was, and yet no man was ever as completely happy and at peace as Jesus.

I know a man whose wife seems bent on destroying every bit of happiness he has. He longs for her and her salvation, but I have never known a more spiritually radiant man.

God made this wonderful combination possible throughout eternity - to long for the ones you love spiritually, but at the same time to be totally at peace in your own soul.

I believe the answer is Yes, we can have Heaven regardless of the eternal destiny of any other human being.

Another question often asked about eternity is Will We Have An Opportunity To Choose After Death? Will we have an opportunity to choose for God or against God after death?

I think not, but I believe psychologically the answer could be yes. Bt I am thoroughly convinced if so, we would make basically the same choices as we have made here. If we have chosen for God and for good all perfectly natural to choose God and good and draw a little closer to Him throughout eternity. If we have always chosen against God and against good here, there is no reason why we should not continue to do so after death.

It is entirely possible that with every choice against God that we make in this life, we are making it more likely that we will make the same choices against God in the next life. And I am relatively certain that there will be those who by the time they reach the point of death will have very little knowledge of what they ought to choose, because they have chosen wrong so often. The faculties of the soul lose their receptibility.

Our choices in eternity will not be basically different from our choices made here.

The last question which I want to mention is the one most often asked about eternity - really it is two questions. Will God Condemn Anyone To Eternal Hell? Will Some People Be Eternally Lost?

I think the answer to the first question is no. God would never condemn any person. God does not condemn. God never punishes. God chastises but never punishes.

I am old enough to remember the horse and buggy days, although I never had any personal experience. But I do know that when the horses or mules used to get out of line, the driver would tap them with the whip and put them back in line. That is chastisement. But when the farmer unharnessed his horses because they had been stubborn, and took his whip and beat them, That Was Punishment.

God never punishes, God chastises. God never holds a grudge. God will never condemn a person to hell. When a person goes to hell, he goes against God's will. In fact, God has built a wall around hell to keep us out. If we go there, we go against His Will.

The answer to the second question Will Some People Be Eternally Lost? is yes. There will be souls eternally lost.

I have gone through periods of believing that ultimately every soul would be saved in the invinite love and forgiveness of God. But I do not believe it now. There is nothing in the Scriptures that supports such a belief. That would mean the breaking of the free will of man, and God will never violate the free will of man. There will be souls that will eternally walk away from God by their own choice.

Do you remember the Elder brother in the story of the Prodigal Son? He could have been in the house enjoying the party and been happy. But he chose to sit outside in the edge of darkness feeling sorry for himself and miserable. Multiply that choice a million times and you have the choice between heaven and hell.

I have tried to talk and pray for dying people who would not change. I remember a few years ago trying to pray for a dying man who knew he was dying. As I held his hand while praying, his last ounce of energy was spent in trying to pull his hand out of mine, resisting to death any effort to save him.

If they will not change knowing they are dying, why would they change five minutes after death and begin to make loving choices? There Will Be Souls Eternally Lost.

Those who choose to walk directly away from God day after day will do it throughout eternity. Salvation is not a matter of Where we are. Salvation is a matter of Which Direction we are moving.

My friend, if you are day by day moving a little nearer God, that is Heaven, and eventually you will know it in all its splendor.

If you day by day moving a little father away from God, that is Hell, and eventually you will know it in all its terror.

My husband and I stopped at a gas station in Florida after a few days' vacation at an oceanside motel. The attendant worked diligently on our salt-encrusted windshield, and, when it was spotless, looked at us and drawled, "There now, folks-- you don't need new glasses after all."

EACH RECURIT at Great Lakes Naval Training Station during World War II was required to jump fully-clothed from a high platform into a swimming pool, swim the length of the pool, return to deep water, disrobe, tie a know in each pant leg and whip the trousers overhead, thereby trapping enough air to keep him afloat ten minutes. One recruit tried without success to whip his pants overhead and catch the required air. All he got was water.

Taking a deep breath, the resourceful recruit went to the bottom of the pool, gathered his legs under him and shoved off. He shot several feet into the air, whipped up his pants and settled back into the water, his water wings secure. He beamed up at the chief petty officer, who had stood grimly watching the procedure.

"A good trick, sonny," said the chief. The he continued softly, "Let's see you do that in the middle of the ocean!"

Question Most Asked About Eternity

By J. Lester McGee, D.D.
Centenary Methodist Church
Saint Louis, Missouri

When you stop to think about it, the passing of time is the most impressive and frightening thing in life.

Years ago our church in Louisville gave us a beautiful Westminster Chimes mantle clock. For sixteen years now that clock has chimed for us every fifteen minutes -- day and night. When we first got it, it almost made a nervous wreck ing off the quarter hours. It seemed to say every time: "Now another 15 minutes have gone by, and you haven't done what you were supposed to do."

Someone has taken the hours of the day from six o'clock in the morning until midnight and compared them to the years of a life from birth to seventy years of age. And this is what he came up with:

If you're 15 years of age, it's 9:51 in the morning of your life.
If you're 20 years of age, it's 8 minutes after 11:00.
If you're 25 years of age, it's 12:25.
If you're 30, it's 1:42 in the afternoon.
If you're 35, it's 2:59 p.m.
If you're 40, it's 17 minutes past 4:00.
If you're 45, it's 5:33 p.m.
If you're 50, it's 6:50 p.m.
If you're 55, it's 7 minutes after 8:00.
If you're 60, it's 9:24.
If you're 65, its 41 minutes after 10:00.
If you're 70, it's approaching midnight.

Well, you can figure out your own time. I am painfully aware that it is already past daylight for me since my time is about 7:10 p.m. As I realize that, I begin to think that whatever I am going to do I had better get busy, if I am going to do it in my lifetime.

The temporal quality of life makes a tremendous impact on us. For instance, if we were to read in the newspapers today that the scientists had discovered that the world would come to an end within 50 years, it would make aprofound impression on us. But actually that very thing is true for most of us in this church this morning. Of course, there are many children and youth who have a good chance of living beyond 50 more years, but for the vast majority of us the world will come to an end with ing the next 50 years.

Of course, we die a little every day. If you are in the habit of looking in the mirror every morning you can see it, if you are an honest person. The lines are a little deeper, the grey a little more pronounced, a little less sparkl in the eyes.

I think God has made it that way on purpose to impress on us the transitory quality of this life, and to shout to us with every new day that we had better concentrate upon those things which do not pass - the eternal qualities of life.

With this in mind I should like to talk to you today on the subject: "Questions Most Asked About Eternity." And this isn't going to be anything psychological, or sociological. You see I am not attempting to be pedagogical, although what I am going to say has a theological category. It is called Eschatology. But be that as it is, I am merely trying to answer in a nutshell the questions you and many others have asked about Eternity.

The first one is Who Will Survive Eternity?

The answer is, I believe, Everyone. Everybody will survive death. The Scriptures indicate that there will be some who will desperately try not to do so. "There will be those who will cry for the rocks and the mountains to fall upon them . . ."

But survival after death is compulsory. Whether we choose to survive or not has nothing to do with it. We are created an eternal spirit, and whether we want to survive death does not matter. We will survive, all of us.

We are Spirits. We have bodies. I am a Spirit. I have and use a body. This eternal spirit within me which is the real me survives forever. We recognize this every day in our normal conversations. We recognize that we are not bodies. Have you ever noticed how we say: "She threw herself across the bed," "He nodded his head," "he drives himself unmercifully"? You see, in our everyday conversations we unconsciously recognize the fact that these bodies are not ourselves. We handle and control the body. We use it.

Sometimes people will say that life after death is wishful thinking. And the truth is that there are many times when we do not wish to survive. A man said to me not long ago: "But I don't want to live forever." It doesn't matter whether he wants to live or not. He will. He has no choice.

The second question often asked about eternity is: When Does Eternity Begin? Does it begin at death? Or on the Judgment Day? When is Judgment Day? When does Eternity begin?

I believe the answer is -- It Has Already Begun. We are in it now. Death is only an event on the long line of eternity, an event that will not change our essential character. But will change only the house in which we live. We are not going to be in eternity. We are in it now.

This is so true that if you are no in heaven today you will not be in it if you were to die at this minute. We are creating the quality of our eternity with the passing of every day.

The attitude of the real Christian is not "I will stand the troubles of this life and the unhappiness of this life so that I might have happiness in heaven after death." Any Christian who is just "suffering through" the unhappiness of this life in the hope of happiness after death is likely to be keenly disappointed. We must possess the Kingdom ere, if we are to possess it in its wonderful form after death.

When the Disciples asked Jesus: "When is Thy Kingdom coming?" He answered: "The Kingdom is already here. The Kingdom of Heaven is within you."

And only that which we have today of florious joy in Christian experience here can be multiplied infinitely in the life to come. We must possess the quality of it in this life, if we are to possess it beyond death. When does eternity begin? It has begun already. We are in it now.

The third question that is often asked about eternity is Where Is Heaven?

I believe the answer is: It dimension with a thin veil hanging between this life and the next. Let me illustrate it scientifically and yet in a way easily understood.

In this Sanctuary this morning there are many pictures floating around in the air. You don't see them, do you? But if we brought in a television set and tuned it in, turning from channel to channel, we would bring every one of those pictures into view.

There are many voices speaking and many musical instruments making sounds in this Sanctuary at this very minute. Yet you do not hear them, but let me turn on this radio and move from number to number o the dial. Believe it? Well, listen . . . . .

This, I think, is an illustration on a level understood by every one of us of the way Heaven is all about us. Yet there is a thin veil obscuring its beauties and bliss from our awareness. But there have been times in human history when God has allowed that veil to part -- the spiritual radio and television apparatus has been turned on momentarily --. It parted or Jesus, you remember, and for Peter, James and John on the Mount of Transfiguration. They talked to those on the other side. Not only Jesus saw them, but the disciples saw them.

This is the "beyond" within us, that sphere of reality higher than our fingers can reach and deeper than our minds can fathom.

I have seen many people die. How often they sit up in bed and look across the room as if looking into the distance, with a wonderful expression as if they were beginning to see through that veil. My dear old grandmother, who was a saint if I ever knew one, keep waving her hand for hours before she passed on in her nineties. She kept calling the name of my grandfather who had preceded her by many years.

Where Is Heaven? It is all about is in a 5th Dimension. An awareness of it is a 6th sense of a 5th Dimension. This isn't mysticism. It isn't spiritualism. It is a spiritual sensitivity reaching beyond the worl d of sight, sound, touch taste and smell. "Seeing that we are encompassed by such a great cloud of witnesses. . ."

The fourth question often asked about eternity is Will We Know each other in Eternity?

I think the answer is Yes -- but a qualified yes.

We will know each other in eternity to the extent that we have known each other spiritually here.

Remember this about eternity -- any relationship that depends upon the physical only, or on money, or influence, or position in society, or even on personality, will not exist. We will know each other as we have communed with each other spiritually in this life.

It is conceivable that a husband and wife who have never known each other spiritually here will not know each other over there, because there are some people who live together and recognize each other physically and never really know each other spiritually. We will know others to the extent that we have known them spiritually here. No spiritual communication here -- no communication there . . . .

Another question often asked about eternity is Can We Enjoy Heaven Even If Loved Ones Are Not There?

I believe the answer is definitely yes. Our heaven does not depend upon any other person on the other side of death any more than it depends on any other person on this side of death. It is entirely possible for me to long for the salvation of my loved ones and still have total peace in my own soul. No man ever was burdened for the souls of men as Jesus was, and yet no man was ever as completely happy and at peace as Jesus.

I know a man whose wife seems bent on destroying every bit of happiness he has. He longs for her and her salvation, but I have never known a more spiritually radiant man.
